No fooling about it — people of all ages fool around

THE best of DEAR Abby

Dear Abby's regular column, Page A6

(Editor's note: The following excerpts taken from the chapter "Fooling Around" is from the Times-News columnist Abigail Van Buren's new book, The Best of Dear Abby, ©1981, Phillips-Van Buren, Inc. Reprinted by permission of the publisher, Andrews and McMeel, 4400 Johnson Drive, Fairway, Kan., 66205. This is the second of a three-part series.)

Over 100 years ago, Alexander Dumas, a Frenchman who supposedly knew his women, said, "The chain of wedlock is so heavy that it takes two to carry it — and sometimes three."

So it should come as no surprise to learn that the practice of fooling around is probably the one activity that provides me with more column material than any other.

If my mail is an accurate barometer, no one is too old to fool around. I hear from men and women in their 80s and 90s who confess sheepishly that they have a taste for "forbidden fruit." (The advantages are obvious. At their ages they don't have to pray for a crop failure.)

The small fry fool around, too. They're never too young to play "doctor," even though they're not old enough to operate.

The singles fool around. Married folks fool around, and those who claim they don't, write about those who do.

It's an ancient practice rooted in restlessness, boredom or just a human hankerin' for variety. There are biblical injunctions about fooling around and civil laws prohibiting it. But, alas, it is still with us. And now, the evidence:

DEAR ABBY: Here's a switch for you: Why should a married man who is seeing another woman on the side (me) keep telling me what a wonderful lover his wife is? If she's so wonderful, what am I doing in the picture?

— PUZZLED

I suggested to "Puzzled" that perhaps he was trying to get her to try harder because she was No. 2.

DEAR ABBY: My husband had too much to drink last night and confessed that the reason he bought me an expensive overnight bag for Valentine's Day was because he'd bought one for his girlfriend and he felt guilty. Now I don't even want the bag.

What do you think? — B.J.

MX plan 'stopgap' deterrent

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger acknowledged Sunday the proposed 100 MX missiles in hardened existing silos is a stopgap nuclear deterrent.

Weinberger added, "but we are facing a wide gap and it is vital to stop it."

In the meantime, Weinberger said, "we will be studying new basing methods that will be more survivable."

But in a separate television interview Chairman John Tower of the Senate Armed Services Committee dismissed the idea as "silo stuffing," and said it "doesn't buy anything but a little time."

Essentially, Tower said, "What we are doing is putting (the MX missiles) in underground silos that already are vulnerable, and continuing the vulnerability."

Weinberger appeared on CBS' "Face the Nation," while Tower was interviewed on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Former Defense Secretary Harold Brown, on ABC's "Issues and Answers," said Reagan's plan to deploy missiles in hardened silos is "better than nothing . . . but I think it was a weak decision."

Jimmy Carter planned to shuttle 200 missiles between 2,400 silos so, Brown said, the Soviets would have to use 10,000 warheads of a megaton each — almost all of their accurate nuclear force — to threaten all of the U.S. shelters.

But Reagan's proposal means the "Soviets would probably have to use 200 warheads to destroy them, leaving 9,800 warheads for something else."

Weinberger argued that if Reagan took no action to modernize America's strategic force, "we would have a window of vulnerability opening with no effort to close it."

"Now," he said, "there will be a period in mid-decade when we will be vulnerable, and that is a period of considerable danger," so "we must start now" to shore up the military.

Weinberger said there is no way to guarantee that missiles in known silos will not be vulnerable, but the Reagan plan proposes to harden from 2,000 to 5,000 pound of pressure per square inch, compared to Carter's plan under which the movable bases would be able to withstand only 600 pounds per square inch.

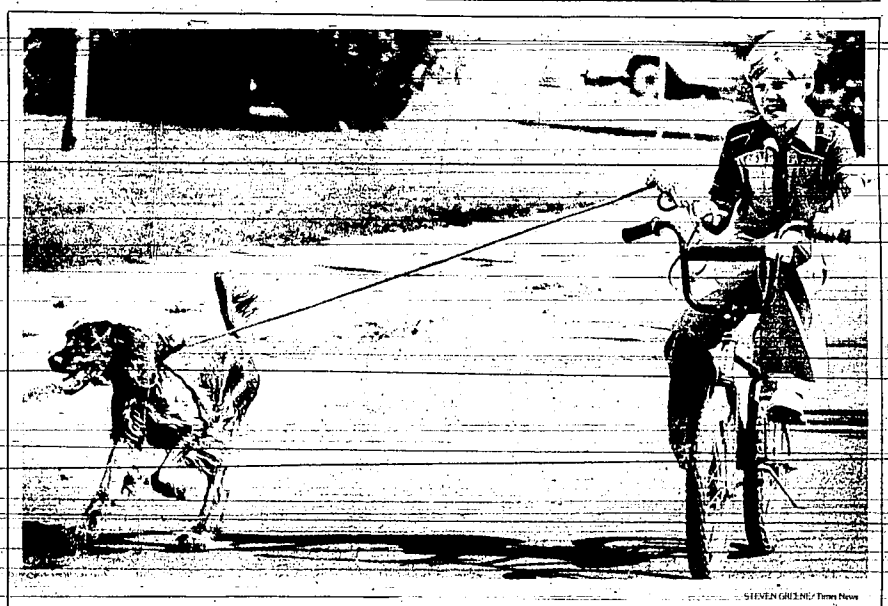

Asked if it is fair to call the proposal a stopgap, he replied: "The MX proposal is a stopgap, yes, but we are facing a wide gap and it is vital to stop it. Their survivability is for a few years, not permanent, so we will be studying new basing modes that are more survivable."

Tower was asked about the argument that the Soviets could simply build more warheads in response to the movable missile plan, which he favors. He replied:

"There is no indication in past Soviet performance that they won't build more missiles anyway. When we build they build, when we don't build, they build."

The movable missiles, Tower said, "would make it far more difficult to knock us out," while the Reagan plan

National debt cracks $1 trillion this week

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sometime this week, the national debt probably will top a trillion dollars for the first time.

The cost of wars, social programs and millions of other projects is to blame.

Congress waited until the last minute to pass the law late last Wednesday that permitted yet another increase in the size of the debt — to $1,079 billion. The action was needed to keep the federal government operating.

By asking for only what was needed, the Reagan administration guaranteed the process will be repeated, a recurring reminder of past wars and other expensive projects, such as Great Society social programs, paid for at the time with bonds and other securities instead of taxes.

Today's taxpayers are footing the bill, which grows everytime the government is forced to borrow money at today's soaring interest rates.

A $1 billion dollar national debt began piling up during World War I and climbed to about $280 billion in World War II. Now, at $1 trillion, that is one followed by 12 zeroes, the debt actually is getting to be a smaller portion of the economy.

Substitution theory fizzles

Grave yields Oswald's body

DALLAS (UPI) — The grave of Lee Harvey Oswald was opened Sunday and a team of pathologists conclusively identified the remains.

The identification disproved a theory that a Russian agent replaced Oswald and assassinated President John F. Kennedy in 1963.

"We hope this puts the matter to rest without further questions as to the identity of the body," said pathologist Dr. Linda Norton, formerly of the Dallas County Medical Examiners office and now an assistant medical examiner in Birmingham, Ala.

The most critical pieces of evidence, she said, were dental records dating to Oswald's Marine Corps career in the mid-1950s and a "bone depression" behind the left ear consistent with a "mastoid operation" such as Oswald had in 1945 at age 6.

Asked if earlier Oswald dental records could have been faked, pathologist Dr. Irving Sopher of West Virginia said, "There is no way in my opinion; there is no reason to doubt. We have very meticulously examined the records."

British author Michael Eddowes had theorized that Oswald was replaced by a Russian agent when Oswald defected to the Soviet Union in 1959. He said evidence "indicated" it was the agent who returned to the United States, killed Kennedy in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963 and then was shot and killed on national television by Dallas nightclub operator Jack Ruby and buried at Rose Hill Burial Park in Fort Worth.

Marina Oswald Porter, who joined Eddowes in the battle for permission to exhume and identify the body, believed strongly that no body would be found, that it had been tampered with after the burial, probably by U.S. government agents.

Eddowes, who spent between $10,000 and $12,000 on the exhumation, said his motive was "to finally ascertain the truth in this matter in hopes that it would comfort all members of the Oswald family. Although surprised, I am not disappointed." He said he had accomplished his goal, which was "to discover the truth of the matter."

After the results were delivered to the family, Mrs. Porter said: "I always intended for this to be a private matter, but it became public because of circumstances beyond my control. It's very unfortunate it became such a public event. Now I have my answers, and from now on I only want to be Mrs. Porter."

Mrs. Porter's husband, Kenneth, said, "If there are any questions in the future, I hope they are directed at someone other than Marina. We've done all we can do."

Dr. Vincent DiMaio, chief medical examiner for San Antonio, Texas, said the body was "in an advanced state of decomposition with partial skeletalization." He confirmed the two rings placed on the left pinky finger of the corpse in 1963 by Mrs. Porter were positively identified Sunday by Mrs. Porter. The rings were reburied with the body.

Dr. Norton said "the best medical guesstimate" as to the height of the corpse was 5 feet 9 inches, consistent with Oswald's height. "In all medical probability," she added, "this body has not been exhumed since it was put in the ground."

She said the medical team would write a detailed medical report to be published in a scientific journal in several months.

The remains were placed in a black, zippered body bag following the autopsy and the bag and fragments of the original wooden coffin were put in a new metal casket and driven back to Rose Hill for a private reburial. The metal casket was to be surrounded in the ground by a steel vault.

Paul Groody, the mortician who embalmed Oswald in 1963 and participated in Sunday's autopsy, said although the body might not be exhumed again "in our lifetime," he felt the historical need to preserve it in metal.

The complicated and secret scheme to exhume the body began late last week when Oswald's older brother,

Controversies face Supreme Court in new term

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court, with a woman justice on the bench for the first time, opens its new term today faced with a multitude of legal controversies. Among them are the death penalty for juveniles, the rights of illegal aliens, campaign funding restrictions and a sensational murder case.

Sandra Day O'Connor, the Arizona state judge who become the first woman member of the high court last month, will join eight other justices for the opening session.

The justices are expected to issue orders in as many as 1,000 cases and then hear oral arguments today.

Among the more emotional questions pending is whether the Constitution prohibits the execution of a person who was less than 18 years of age when he committee his crime.

The Oklahoma case — the only capital punishment case the court has so far agreed to hear this term — involves Monty Lee Eddings, whose lawyers cite an international agreement signed by the United States that pledges nations not to execution a person for a crime he committed when he was less than 18.

A sensational murder case not involving the death penalty also is pending, in which the justices will review the murder conviction of Jeffrey MacDonald, a former military physician accused of slaying his wife and children.

A lower court overturned MacDonald's conviction, concluding his right to a speedy trial was violated by the lengthy period between his arrest and trial.

A case particularly important for states along the Mexican border will provide a key test of the constitutional rights of illegal aliens. At issue is whether Texas can refuse to provide free public education for children of illegal aliens. Lower courts struck down a Texas law that allows school districts to refuse children of illegal aliens or charge them tuition.

Politicians and political parties will follow closely several cases before the court that focus on the constitutionality of government efforts to limit campaign contributions by outside groups.

The most significant dispute turns on whether the government may limit independent political action committees — unaffiliated with presidential candidate committees — from spending more than $1,000 to support a candidate.

Another campaign funding case concerns whether a state political party may assign its spending authority for Senate races to the richer national party.

And the justices will weigh the constitutionality of a Berkeley, Calif., ordinance that limits to $250 campaign contributions to committees formed to support or oppose specific ballot measures.

Religion — a never-ending source of cases coming to justices — again will draw attention to the high court. The most significant pending case involves the constitutionality of a University of Missouri regulation prohibiting the use of campus facilities for religious teaching or worship.

Another religious issue to be decided this fall concerns the constitutionality of a Minnesota law requiring public disclosure of funding for religious groups that collect more than half their funds by public solicitation. The Unification Church of Rev. Sun Myung Moon claims the requirement is improper.

A case of major interest to the nation's big cities is a challenge to the 1980 Census. The court will decide whether a municipality may review census records in order to contest its local population count.

Many financially strapped Northeast and Midwest cities that lost population from 1970-80 stand to lose millions of dollars in federal money, based on the census count.

Another case attracting interest from municipalities will test whether local governments may ban the sale of drug-related accessories known as "paraphernalia." Several lower courts have ruled that ordinances restricting the sale of such items give police too much discretion in enforcement.

Monday briefing

Kimball stabilizes, alert

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Mormon Church President Spencer Kimball suffered a relapse of internal bleeding, but doctors say his condition stabilized after the bleeding was stopped and he was alert Sunday.

Kimball, hospitalized since Sept. 5, when he underwent surgery to removed a blood clot from his brain, suffered the relapse Saturday night.

Dr. Ernest Wilkinson said the Mormon leader was alert and sitting up in his bed Sunday to watch televised sessions of the Mormon Church's 151st Semiannual General Conference which was being held in the Tabernacle on Temple Square.

Wilkinson said Kimball had been making good progress in his recovery from the surgery until the internal bleeding developed last week. Wilkinson said the bleeding was controlled until late Saturday night.

"President Kimball suffered a re-occurance of intestinal bleeding Saturday night and underwent endoscopic examination to identify the bleeding point, which was then cauterized," Wilkinson said.

The bleeding was apparently stopped, he said, but a blood transfusion was required.

Idaho lead trial continues

BOISE (UPI) — A federal court trial pitting Kellogg's major industry against nine children who grew up amid allegedly poisonous conditions in the northern Idaho lead-smelter town plows into its fourth week today.

Bunker Hill Co. has yet to present its case in defense of allegations by attorneys for the children that the mine and smelter company neglected the Kellogg environment and damaged the health of residents through lead exposure.

Lawyers pressing the $20 million civil suit against Bunker Hill called more than 30 witnesses during the initial three weeks of the trial. Additional dozens of names remain on a list of potential witnesses.

Iowan receives new heart

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (UPI) — The heart of an 18-year-old South African youth was flown 500 miles and transplanted into 29-year-old Rick Anderson of Iowa City, Iowa, in what doctors called the world's first "heart airlift."

The operation took place Sunday in Cape Town.

The transplant team was led by Dr. Christiaan Barnard, who performed the world's first heart transplant operation in the late 1960's.

Anderson was in excellent condition after the five-hour operation.

Anderson, a former All-State football player rejected a heart in 1979 after an operation at Cape Town's Groote Schuur hospital. He returned to South Africa three months ago in the hope of finding a donor that could save his life.

Walesa issues stern warning

GDANSK, Poland (UPI) — A furious Lech Walesa warned two cabinet ministers Sunday "you will not be able to control us" if the government persists in raising prices of consumer goods.

"Telephone the prime minister to stop the price hikes," the leader of Poland's independent labor union Solidarity roared at Finance Minister Marian Krzak and state Price Commission chief Zdzislaw Krasinski, before a stormy session of the labor federation's national congress.

Met by laughter and derision from the congress, the finance minister and chief price commissioner pleaded that the government needed to increase prices to raise money to pay for social services.

"The increases must be stopped," delegates shouted back.

Krzak assured the congress that a referendum would be held over another sweeping series of price increases still being discussed in the government which would raise prices of many goods by 300 or 400 percent.

Stones triumph in Boulder

BOULDER, Colo. (UPI) — The Rolling Stones, performing on a gaudy purple and pink stage, Sunday dazzled a crowd of 58,000 with flowers and song at Folsom Stadium in the final of two concerts on the University of Colorado campus.

Police reported no major disturbances, unlike the last time the Stones played Boulder in 1978 when several hundred concert goers passed out from the mix of drugs, alcohol and scorching sun.

Missionary's body returned

GUATEMALA CITY (UPI) — The body of a Canadian missionary-turned-guerrilla leader was flown to Montreal Sunday, ending a three-month effort by the Canada government to recover the corpse, Guatemalan officials said.

They said the remains of the Rev. Raoul Leger, 39, of Bouctouche, New Brunswick, were exhumed from a common grave in Guatemala City during the weekend and returned to Canada.

Bess Truman making gains

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — The doctor for former first lady Bess Truman Sunday said his 96-year-old patient is more vigorous and more alert than she has been since entering the hospital a week ago Sunday.

Still listed in fair condition, Mrs. Truman is recovering smoothly from a mild stroke she suffered Sept. 28 at her Independence, Mo., home. She was admitted to Research Medical Center the next day in serious condition.

Mormon founder holds rank equal to biblical prophets

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — With Mormon Church President Spencer W. Kimball watching on closed-circuit television from his hospital bed, Elder Bruce R. McConkie opened the second day of the Mormon Church's 151st Semiannual General Conference Sunday, saying that Joseph Smith Jr., founder of the faith, is an equal with Abraham and Moses of the Old Testament.

McConkie, a member of the church's Council of the Twelve Apostles, said "It is fashionable in some quarters to contend that we Mormons esteem the prophet Joseph Smith so highly that even the Lord Jesus takes a secondary position."

But McConkie said Smith is seen only as a prophet "who stands preeminent above all men in greatness and spiritual stature."

"It is true that his place in the heavenly heirarchy makes him a prophet of prophets and a seer of seers," McConkie told the gathering. "He ranks with Enoch, Abraham and Moses. But salvation is in Christ, not in Abraham, not in Moses and not in Jospeh Smith."

"Joseph Smith is the revealer of Christ and the knowledge of salvation," McConkie said. "At the direction of the Lord, he organized the only true and living church on earth."

McConkie also told the faithful that the future holds wars, plagues and desolations that will sweep the earth soon.

"The heavens gather blackness," McConkie said. "Men's hearts are failing them for fear, nations are perplexed and know not where to turn to find peace and security."

"This is a day in which mad men in high places, in an instant, can unleash such fearful weapons that millions can be slain between the rising and the setting of the sun," McConkie warned.

"There has never been such a dire day as this," he said. "It is because of the evils and ills which cover the earth, because men have strayed from the Lord's ordinances . . . that the Lord has given us a message to deliver to our fellow men."

He said the Mormon faithful have been commanded to preach the gospel to the disbelieving world and to fulfill the divine mission of Joseph Smith.

"Our position and status and divine commission is no different than that of the prophets and apostles of old," McConkie said. "We also are the agents of the Lord. We, as they, are legal administrators who have power to bind on earth and have it sealed everlastingly in the heavens."

Federal health officials launching quest into causes of birth defects

ATLANTA (UPI) — Federal health officials have launched the largest study ever undertaken to determine the cause of birth defects.

It is a $1.5-million research project involving 10,000 infants and their parents.

A team of 30 investigators using telephone and city directories, voting lists, post office forwarding addresses and personal interviews with neighbors are tracing the parents of 7,000 infants born since 1968 with major birth defects.

The parents of another 3,000 normal children will participate as controls.

The study is being done in the five-county Atlanta metropolitan area, where the national Centers for Disease Control has been compiling a register of malformed infants for more than a decade.

When the extensive interviewing of the 20,000 parents is completed in about 18 months and the data analyzed, federal health officials hope they will know some of the factors that cause the birth of deformed babies.

Dr. David Erickson, chief of the CDC's birth defects study, calls it the largest medical investigation of its kind ever attempted.

"I don't know of anything remotely approaching this," he said. "It is the largest I've ever heard of."

Erickson estimated that 3 percent of the infants born annually in the United States — about 100,000 each year — begin life with major birth defects.

The study is funded by the CDC, Department of Defense and the Veterans Administration. The latter two agencies are involved because part of the study will seek to determine if the defoliant Agent Orange, used during the Vietnam War, may have caused some veterans to sire malformed babies.

I frequently hear from people who suspect their mate of "fooling around" and write to me for confirmation of the evidence.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married three years. I thought we had a good marriage, although our sex life seemed to be going downhill. (He was always too tired.)

My mother, who lives 400 miles away, phoned to say that my father had suddenly become very ill, so I went to be with her for a week. On returning home, I found a pair of earrings for pierced ears on the nightstand beside our bed.

I showed them to my husband and demanded an explanation. He swore he'd never seen them before and had no idea how they got there. What should I do? — MY SIGN IS LEO

DEAR LEO: Don't hassle him. Just keep your eyes open for a woman with two extra holes in her head.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: My husband is having an affair with a widow who lives across the street. When he drives by her house, he slows up and blinks his lights. Then she flips her venetian blinds. They signal back and forth, then later he makes up excuses to get out of the house to meet her. He says they are only good friends, but I know that she is man-hungry and has an eye for my husband. How should I put a stop to this? — JEALOUS

DEAR JEALOUS: You can't stop a man from "blinking" his lights, neither can you prevent a woman from "flipping" for him — get them both together and have a truth or consequence session.

DEAR ABBY: I've been married to a good-looking cross-country truck driver for 10 years. I'm not the suspicious type, but Friday night he came off the road with two long scratches on his left hip. They were fairly deep scratches, yet neither his shorts nor his trousers were ripped.

When I asked him where he got the scratches, he said they were probably from a feather in the bed. Now, Abby, I'd like to believe him, but do they still have feather-bedding in modern motels? And could anybody get scratched like this from a feather? — NOT DUMB

DEAR NOT: It's unlikely that the scratches came from a feather. It was probably the whole chick.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: This morning I was going through my husband's wallet, and I came across a list of ladies' sizes for everything from coats, dresses, gloves and hosiery to bras. It was "signed" with a lipstick imprint, "From your Honey." What does this mean? — ARLINGTON

DEAR ARLINGTON: It probably means that you can't trust your husband, and somebody else can't trust your husband's memory. (At least you know the vital statistics of your competition.)

• • •

When Sir Walter Scott wrote about that tangled web we weave when first we practice to deceive, he must have known someone who was fooling around:

DEAR ABBY: My husband could tell I was talking to some guy because I hung up real fast when I saw him, so I lied and told him it was "J" (another friend of his), but I told him that nothing ever happened between us. (It's true, nothing did.)

Since this incident, my husband has been very cool to "J." I feel awful and want to clear "J's" name, but I'm afraid if I do my husband might suspect "B." What should I do? — IN MESS IN K.C.

I told her to tell her husband that the guy on the phone wasn't "J," and if he guessed it was "B," she better run like "H."

"means they could knock us out with fewer missiles and have more left over for other purposes" like hitting U.S. industrial plants or population centers.

But Tower said that except for the missile decision, he believes that "for the most part the defense package is supportable . . . a good modernization package."

America needs the follow-on long-range aircraft or bomber, he said, since it probably will not get the radar-resistent Stealth plane in operation early enough, so it is wise to go to a derivative of the B-1 as an interim stopgap measure, Tower said.

Weinberger also defended the decision to build the B-1 bomber, and both officials insisted the B-1 will not become obsolete when the Stealth bomber is developed.

Weinberger said it "will have substantial use for conventional forces after Stealth comes in." Tower said it also can be used to deliver cruise missiles.

Deeper cuts, he said, as members of Congress have predicted, means "there will be a tragic set of results because it will say to the world that we are following an irresolute, vascillating stand."

Marina Oswald wanted grave opened for sake of family

DALLAS (UPI) — Marina Oswald Porter, the Russian-born widow of the accused assassin of President John F. Kennedy, said she wanted the remains of her late husband exhumed to answer doubts for the sake of her family.

The 40-year-old Mrs. Porter, who married Rockwall carpenter Kenneth Porter and is the mother of three children, was present for the surprise exhumation Sunday. She refused to view the skeletal remains herself but had trusted friends with the body.

During the autopsy at Baylor University Medical Center she was asked to identify two rings she placed on Oswald's body the day of his burial at Fort Worth's Rose Hill Burial Park in November, 1963.

Saturday, the day before the exhumation, Mrs. Porter spent hours in meetings with attorneys planning the event. Mrs. Porter recalled the years of work and anguish leading to the successful exhumation.

"Somehow it hasn't hit me yet," she said the night before. "But I just don't know how I'm going to sleep. Kenneth and I have to be up at 4 a.m. Anyway — maybe we just won't bother."

There was lots of laughter — most of it nervous.

"I'm doing this for my family," she said a few weeks ago during the court battle to exhume the remains. "I never want my children to go through what I've had to go through all these years."

Mrs. Porter, called shy and retiring when she was thrust into the limelight nearly 20 years ago after Oswald's arrest, has appeared more in public in recent years, before congressional committees and in print.

In 1978, she testified before the House Assassinations Committee and in sometimes faltering English for 6½ hours told about her life with the ex-Marine accused of killing Kennedy in Dallas.

She met Oswald after he defected to Russia in 1959. Married only six weeks after they met at a dance in Minsk in 1961, they moved to Texas in 1962, briefly living in New Orleans in 1963, and then returning to Dallas.

Remembering the day of the assassination, Mrs. Porter told the committee she heard on television that shots had been fired from the Texas School Book Depository where her husband worked.

"My heart kind of stopped," she said. "I felt very uncomfortable. I thought my face would betray me. My face went red. I fled outside. It crossed my mind . . . I hoped it wasn't him."

Mrs. Porter has three children, daughters June, 19, and Rachel, 17, by Oswald, and son Mark, 15, by Porter.

The Porters arrived at a Fort Worth motel early Sunday for the long-awaited task, entering Room 144 as about 15 uniformed officers stood outside, some specially assigned as her bodyguard.

Mrs. Porter questioned her attorney, Jerry Pittman, asking one last time if the exhumation were legal.

Pittman assured her it was because a temporary restraining order had expired at midnight — less than six hours earlier.

"OK," she told UPI reporter Dan Carmichael, "You are my witness. My lawyer says it's legal."

At 5:24 a.m. a caravan of cars, including Mrs. Porter, left for the burial park and just after 6:30 a.m. the gates were opened. The task began.

Burial park workers carry Lee Harvey Oswald's coffin to hearse for autopsy trip

Oswald

Robert Oswald of Wichita Falls, Texas, decided to end his opposition to the exhumation. Prime among the reasons for his reversal was an adverse decision by the Texas Court of Appeals which indicated strongly that the court would give Mrs. Porter permission to open the grave.

Since Eddowes first advanced his theory in the mid-1970s and then began pressing through the courts for the exhumation order in 1979, it had been Robert who fiercely opposed it.

Last summer, Mrs. Porter gave Eddowes permission to open the grave and the group was two days away from its planned exhumation when Robert Oswald found out about it and obtained a temporary injunction.

Mrs. Porter, who in 1980 became convinced of the possibility her husband was not the real Lee Harvey Oswald, took over the legal fight several months ago. She withdrew her permission from Eddowes, and sought the exhumation order herself.

MICHAEL EDDOWES
...paid for exhumation

UPI learned that more than 150 X-rays and pictures were taken of the body from all angles during the autopsy, and that that evidence could be used in the future.

The exhumation began Sunday in darkness and in extreme secrecy with the arrival of security guards at the Rose Hill Burial Park in Fort Worth at 5 a.m. CDT. Within an hour, workmen with backhoes had pushed through a concrete vault to the coffin and in another half-hour had lifted the rotted coffin to the surface.

Mrs. Porter and her husband sat in a silver-colored car, watching the men work.

William C. Dear, who handled part of the security for the operation, said the vault had cracked and water had seeped into the coffin, reducing the body to skeletal remains.

"It (the body) was badly decomposed, but I could see hair on the scalp," Dear said. "The body was falling apart."

The body was taken from the original coffin, placed in a white cardboard box and taken in a 15-car motorcade on the 45-minute trip to the Baylor University Medical Center in Dallas for the autopsy. Pathologists worked on the body for over four hours, spending most of their time on the minute comparison of the body's teeth with Oswald's dental records from the Marine Corps.

In addition, doctors looked for the "mastoid" scars.

A spokesman for Mrs. Porter said rings which she had placed on the corpse just prior to its burial in 1963, including an intricate ring made in Russia, also were found.

Medical team for autopsy

DALLAS (UPI) — All members of the medical team chosen to autopsy and X-ray the remains in Lee Harvey Oswald's coffin and compare the findings with earlier Oswald medical and dental records to determine the identity of the corpse donated their services.

The medical team members were paid only enough to cover their actual expenses, Jerry Pittman, lawyer for Marina Oswald Porter said. British author Michael Eddowes financed the exhumation.

The members of the team:

•Dr. Vincent DiMaio, chief medical examiner, San Antonio, Texas.

•Dr. Weldon Fillery, associate director of pathology, Baylor University Medical Center.

•Dr. James A. Cottone, associate professor and head of the section on forensic odontology, dental diagnostic science, University of Texas at San Antonio, San Antonio, Texas.

•Hamo Megerditchian, forensic pathology assistant, Dallas County medical examiner's office, Dallas.

•Felix Cordero Jr., X-ray technician, University of Texas at San Antonio.

Thin out high brass ranks, save money, Aspin suggests

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan could easily cut nearly $2 billion from the defense budget by laying off swivel-chair generals, shore-bound admirals and some lower-ranking officers, Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., suggested Sunday.

Aspin, a onetime Defense Department analyst who frequently criticizes Pentagon policies, said the Army, Navy and Air Force are too top-heavy with brass — especially when compared to World War II days.

The Navy now has an admiral for every two warships, he said, compared with one for every 15 ships when World War II ended.

The Air Force, he said, had 198 planes per general in 1945. Now it has 30.

And the Army now has only 1,843 soldiers for each general, compared with 3,876 during the war.

"As long as the administration is cutting bloated federal employee rolls, why doesn't it take a look at the military too?" Aspin asked in a statement released by his office.

Cutting the number of generals and admirals to World War II levels could save about $5 million a year in pay alone, he said.

In addition, Aspin said, generals and admirals have headquarters and staffs that add to the costs of keeping them in uniform.

"It's hard to figure out how many of these staffs are excess," he admitted. But he said there is a three-star general "in command of no divisions" in Japan and nine in Hawaii for just one division.

Larger staffs may be justified because of the greater complexity of modern weapons, he said.

"But," Aspin said, "there's lots of room for reductions in headquarters. For example, we're putting a lot fewer college students through ROTC (Reserve Officer Training Corps) today than we did in World War II, but nowadays we have four generals supervising ROTC when we had one in World War II."

Aspin said the Army alone could save $600 million by cutting its percentage of officers from the current 11 percent to the World War II level of 7 percent.

"Multiply that by three services and it comes to nearly $2 billion," he said. "When you count in the potential reductions in retirement obligations for future years, the long term savings is a lot more."

Aspin also suggested that having too many officers might be reducing the fighting efficiency of the military. He said only 3 percent of the German army was in the officer corps during World War II.

"Some scholars have concluded that the German cap on officers was partly responsible for their higher fighting efficiency," he said. "Because they commissioned so few, they could restrict their officer ranks to better leaders."

High marks for Reagan in survey

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan wins high marks from Congress after eight months in office, a survey released by U.S. News & World Report showed Sunday.

The magazine asked all members of Congress for their assessment of Reagan's performance to date.

Of the 228 lawmakers who responded to the questionnaire, 86 percent rated Reagan as a "strong" president, compared to 9 percent who said "average" and 5 percent who said "below average."

More than half of the legislators — 51 percent — said Reagan's greatest ability is being able to marshal support for his programs. Twenty-five percent said his greatest ability is exerting political leadership and 18 percent said it is working with Congress. Another 3 percent said it is managing the bureaucracy and 3 percent said it is dealing with foreign governments.

Rep. Daniel Akaka, D-Hawaii, said Reagan "has managed to give the people of this country a sense of unity and of purpose we haven't seen since Franklin D. Roosevelt."

On the other side of the coin, 51 percent of the respondents said Reagan's greatest weakness lies in his inability to deal with foreign governments, while 40 percent said his greatest weakness is his inability to manage the bureaucracy.

Reagan fared worse in questions concerning his world leadership.

A little more than a third — 37 percent — said he was "very effective," compared to 43 percent who said he was "average" and 20 percent, "below average."

Ambulance issue: At very least, bid

The debate over whether Twin Falls County can accommodate two ambulance services defies an easy answer or solution.

Both sides in this controversy — those who believe only one service can survive, and those who support competition, vis-a-vis "free enterprise" — have some good and logical arguments to put forth.

It also would appear that the community at large is split over the issue. Both sides have their supporters, but there is no overwhelming attitude that tips the balance.

The county commissioners this week are expected to provide an answer in the form of acting on a request for an operating license from a second service. Their decision will be made on an interpretation of Ordinance No. 20, which addresses ambulance service, and their interpretation of the results of an investigation against the existing service. They must address both issues.

If the commissioners approve a license for a second service, they will be accused of creating a great deal of stress, turmoil and confusion within the county. They will be accused of creating an "ambulance war." But they also will be supported for believing in free enterprise.

If the commissioners deny the license, they will not only be accused of government intervention in what is supposed to be a free market concept, but they will be accused of favoring an existing service whose record of service has been clouded by the investigation. But they also will be supported by those who believe public services can't be placed on competitive levels.

Most citizens believe, as we do, that in a free enterprise system demand will be satisfied by adequate levels of goods and services at competitive prices. But some also believe that in this case, two competing services would create an antithesis resulting in one or both services going broke. Much of that reasoning, however, is based on speculation.

We've also seen a great deal of arguing that has compared apples to oranges. Although an ambulance service is perceived to be a "public service," it is indeed operated as a private business in Twin Falls County. True, the county does provide a subsidy, $8,900 annually, but only to support indigent cases.

Perhaps Cal Edwards, manager of the existing service, Magic Valley Ambulance Service, provided a solution in a letter to the editor last Wednesday. He suggested the county either make ambulance service a true public entity or put the new contract up for bids.

The latter suggestion does make sense. If the county is going to be involved at all in securing goods and services for its citizens, why has it not applied the bid system all along? That would be admitting that only one ambulance service is needed, but it would give all competitors an even chance at securing the contract.

Even that, however, doesn't settle the free enterprise arguments. But will public need for ambulance service in an emergency be decided on price? It might make a difference when it comes to transporting patients of a non-emergency nature, but how many people consider cost when emergency medical care is required?

On the other hand, with two services, more transport and service opportunities will be available. If two services can make it, the public will benefit.

Work in home: good or bad?

© Universal Press Syndicate

WASHINGTON — Today's reflections have to do with homework, but not the kind of homework that calls for writing a theme or learning the eight-times table.

The Department of Labor is about ready to act on proposed regulations that could affect thousands of persons — most of them women, many of them immigrants — who perform work in their homes for industries in interstate commerce.

The story dates back almost 40 years, to the period soon after adoption of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938. In 1941 the Department of Labor concluded that many employers, chiefly in the garment industry, were circumventing the act by contracting with women to work in their homes where long hours and sub-minimum compensation could go undetected.

The result was a sweeping prohibition on such homework in seven areas — women's apparel, jewelry, knitted outerwear, gloves and mittens, buttons and buckles, handkerchiefs and embroideries. The rules exempted only elderly and disabled workers and those who had to care for an invalid at home.

Five months ago Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan announced a proposal to repeal the 1941 regulations all across the board. His announcement kicked up a storm of 10,000 comments pro and con. In recent weeks, rumors have floated around Washington that not all of the seven areas would be affected. Perhaps only knitted outerwear would be removed from the ban. In any event, Mr. Donovan's recommendation has gone to the Office of Management and Budget, the final arbiter of rules and regulations under the Reagan administration, and a decision is expected almost any time.

No one has solid figures on the number of persons engaged in the homework under review. In a non-agricultural work force of 94 million, the percentage plainly is minute. But under the same providence by which our Father watches the fall of a single sparrow, so the Department of Labor is concerned with "exploitation" even of the very few.

As spokesmen for organized labor see it, homework is a terrible evil. In hearings early this year, Max B. Wolf of the Garment Workers Union termed such labor "the most vicious means of exploitation and the most ruthless and unscrupulous type of business practice ever perpetrated on the public." Mr. Wolf termed the employers of homeworkers "slave traffickers." He painted a melancholy picture of illegal sewing "in dirty rat-and-cockroach-infested kitchens and bedrooms" where "an 11-year-old with whooping cough might be walking around while the garment is being made."

On the other hand, practitioners of homework regard their cottage industry as the very essence of the American way. Emma Pudvah of Hardwick, Vt., testified that she earns up to $6 an hour by working at home on her own knitting machine. She is thus able to look after her 3-year-old daughter. "I would think the government would be glad to see people trying to earn their way in the world," she said. "Would you rather we went on welfare?"

Most of the homeworkers apparently work for such small businesses as C.B. Sports in Bennington, Vt., which had been selling $350,000 worth of home-knitted ski caps a year until the DOL began leaning on him in 1979. He wants his 50 home knitters back. Otherwise he will be obligated "to look for production resources primarily in the Orient."

The issue is not an easy one. Nothing in the history of the garment industry suggests that all employers are pillars of compassion and virtue. Left free to circumvent wage-and-hour provisions, many employers might revert to the brutal practices that once were the shame of their industry. But there is something fundamentally wrong in prohibiting a freeborn American from working in his home at whatever wage he finds acceptable.

My thought would be to rescind the 40-year-old regulations and see what happens. If this results in wholesale "exploitation," the rules could be reimposed. Meanwhile, many women who are unwilling or unable to work in factories — especially women in rural areas — might welcome a chance to work at home.

His view of Nixon's library

©Los Angeles Times Syndicate

This may come as a surprise to many people but I believe Duke University did the right thing when it decided to build a Richard Nixon Library on its campus.

The only stipulation I would make is that all the Nixon papers and ALL the tapes be deposited there. Since he is probably the most interesting President we've ever had, I would hate to think that future historians would be deprived of many of the more private aspects of the man, when he served our country so well.

We all know about the Nixon who ended the Vietnam war, opened up relations with the People's Republic of China, brought detente between the United States and the Soviet Union and battled for the First Amendment rights of all American citizens.

But I have a feeling that behind the public image, there was another Nixon that no one knows. Behind that winning smile and demeanor of confidence that all of us loved, could have been a man with doubts and fears.

As I conceive the library, it should be divided into two sections. The Presidential Nixon part of the building would contain all his state papers, his speeches, his discussions with world leaders, the gifts and honors that were bestowed on him from a grateful citizenry, and photos such as the one of him talking to anti-war protesters about football on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial.

This section would capture the spirit of a president who had to deal with the great problems of his country and the world. It would be an inspiration for generations of Americans to come, and a tribute to the 37th President of the United States.

The second section of the library would be connected by a Watergate and chiseled over its entrance in marble would be the simple words, "I Am Not a Crook."

I believe this section should be designed by the Walt Disney people. When you entered it you would be greeted with an exact replica of the Oval Office. A wax figure of President Nixon would be seated behind the president's desk wired for sound.

In chairs, and standing around the office, would be wax figures of Haldeman, Colson, Ehrlichman, Dean and John Mitchell constructed so they, too, would be able to speak.

There would be an amphitheater, where people could sit comfortably and listen to all the tapes as the inner circle discussed the private matters that took up as much of President Nixon's time as the public ones.

When the tapes indicated only one or two members of the president's staff were in the office, stagehands could remove the others.

To give people an opportunity to buy popcorn and soft drinks, there would be an 18 1/2-minute intermission during the show.

For the first time, a Presidential Library would provide American citizens with the human side of a man who held the highest office in the land. His spirit and those around him would come alive for tourists, who could actually hear their voices discussing the tribulations and heartaches of an administration beleaguered by enemies from every walk of life.

Duke University has an opportunity to do the real Richard Nixon justice, and I hope they don't blow it by just showing him being pelted with tomatoes in Venezuela.

Can modern women hold on to gains they've made?

© Washington Post Writers Group

CHICAGO — They are all bankers sitting in front of me.

A thousand women, they range around the banquet tables, their ranks spotted with a few male spouses and bosses.

It is an impressive number. A thousand bank officers, all meeting at The National Association of Banking Women.

The NABW is, I know, only one among the hundreds of professional and business women's groups founded during the first wave of opportunity. Like the others, it grew slowly for a half century, as women inched their way up the ladder, one by one. Then, fueled by the women's movement, its membership catapulted in a decade from 10,000 to 27,000.

But today, spending just a few hours with some of these women, I hear hints of a new uncertainty, a fragility — even among women who have made progress, who have made "it." There is, everywhere, a concern, sometimes subterranean, sometimes on the surface, about whether the gains women have made can survive the times.

The women here are bankers. The bankers here are women. They would prefer that there was no conflict between these two pieces of their identity. Yet, sometimes there is.

On my right the thoughtful and articulate president of the NABW, Jane McGavock Smith of Richmond, Va., shares her concern about the need to deregulate the banks. We talk about the problems and pressures on banking in this economy, and then go on to talk about the problems and pressures on women. She is, symbolically, a bank vice-president, a compliance officer, and pregnant.

During the week, the women hear Presidential Assistant Elizabeth Dole enlist their support for Reagan economic programs. During the week, they also hear that the Reagan cuts in social programs are directed most harshly at women. Double messages.

Half-a-dozen participants share with me the fear, not of Reaganomics but of Reaganatmosphere. It is harder for women, even in the higher stratas, to breath easily.

Alene Moris, a long-time consultant to the NABW and a 52-year-old Seattle feminist, worries that once again the men in power have been given "psychological permission" to discriminate against women.

This news raises goosebumps across the flesh of women who have struggled up. Even those who are "Not Feminists But" owe their advance in part to the women's movement. The average NABW member came up the ranks from bank teller. She rose through affirmative atmosphere, if not affirmative action. That road, too, seems narrower now.

In a tight economy it is harder for anyone to move. The gap between the women who have and have not made it becomes increasingly harder to bridge. In tough times, even the women who have a foothold may worry more about slipping down than about helping others up.

Ten years ago, 15 years ago, there was a sense of "sisterhood" or commonality that cut across other lines, other differences between women. Then, almost all the women came up out of clerical work or homemaking or discrimination.

Now often the younger women, the "Hotshot MBAs," come with freshly minted degrees and short histories. They have not — yet — bumped against the ceiling of sex discrimination. They do not — yet — know what they have in common, even with the woman at this banquet, a prize-winner, who asked her husband for permission three times before he "let her" go to work.

Perhaps in my brief visit; I was too sensitive to the fibrillations of bad times. There is strength and hope here, too. There is the mutual support from women who come together to boost skills and confidence. There is the energy and commitment that comes only out of organizing and organizations.

Still, I am struck by the sense of how vulnerable women really are inside this visible progress. Vulnerable to the economy. Vulnerable to the Reaganatmosphere. Vulnerable to their own conflicting loyalties. Vulnerable to the differences between women.

A thousand women. Yes, it is an impressive number. But I wonder if it will be next year.

Voting Rights Act showdown looms today

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A showdown over extending full enforcement requirements of the Voting Rights Act is scheduled in the House today.

Both backers and opponents hope the administration stays out of the fight.

There is no sizable opposition to extension of the act itself. Debate centers on the section that requires areas with a history of discrimination against minority voters to get advance federal approval before making any changes in electoral laws or regulations.

That "pre-clearance" provision now affects nine states and parts of 13 others.

According to the House Democratic Study Group, President Reagan at first favored extending this provision uniformly to all states — a move the bill's sponsors claim would destroy the act by spreading the enforcement mechanism too thin to be effective.

In June, Reagan asked Attorney General William French Smith to submit a position paper to him by Oct. 1, but it is not known whether it has been submitted or what it contains.

Reagan, meanwhile, said in July he favored extending the provision as written but at his news conference last week he avoided a definitive answer to a question about it and his current position is not known.

"I have heard rumors that it (the Smith paper) was not totally acceptable to either position and might cause problems," said one House source who asked not to be identified.

"The Republican leadership does not want to know the White House position," this source said, "And opponents of (a compromise bill) are leery of it."

Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., a leading proponent of the extension bill who helped draft the compromise, got the debate under way in the House Friday and demanded that all debate and voting be finished Monday even if it means a night session.

Edwards started with a bill that would simply extend the current enforcement provision 10 years, until 1992. But Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., who started out opposing the provision and now supports it, sold the idea that a "bail-out" provision for the covered states would give them an incentive to improve.

Joined by Reps. James F. Sensenbrenner, R-Wis., and Hamilton Fish, R-N.Y., Edwards pushed through bail-out requirements that Hyde now claims are too strict for any state or subdivision to comply with.

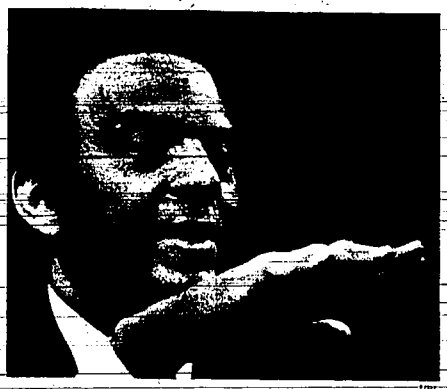

Hyde and Republican Reps. Dan Lungren, Calif., and Caldwell Butler, Va., plotted strategy during the weekend for defeating the coalition, amid speculation they would not welcome White House help.

Under the coalition proposal, pre-clearance would continue indefinitely but for the first time a state or jurisdiction could win a "pardon" from the requirements by winning a federal court judgment agreeing that for 10 years it has met all of the strict conditions in the new bill.

The suit would have to be filed in Washington; not a local federal court, and would have to show the state had a 10-year perfect compliance record and demonstrated active encouragement of minority voting.

The most controversial condition is one saying any misdeed by officials of any county would set the clock back another 10 years for the whole state.

Unless Congress acts, the pre-clearance provision, which covers Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina, Alaska, Arizona and Texas, almost half of North Carolina and parts of other states, will expire Aug. 6, 1982.

Andrew Young: relaxed campaign for Atlanta mayor's seat

Young's campaign to vote this week

ATLANTA (UPI) — Former U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young's easygoing six-month campaign to re-enter Southern politics comes to a vote this week in a mayoral election with inescapable racial overtones.

Young, a congressman for four years before fellow Georgian Jimmy Carter tapped him for his ill-fated U.N. stint, became an instant front-runner in the race to succeed Mayor Maynard Jackson when he announced his candidacy May 6.

Jackson was ineligible for re-election following two consecutive four-year terms. Young said he did not want to run, but saw no one else who would run the city his way.

And despite the enthusiastic support of Jackson and an endorsement from his old Southern Christian Leadership allies, Young's casual stump style has done little to quash speculation that he does not really want the job.

Polls indicate state Rep. Sidney Marcus, the white liberal chairman of the county's delegation to the Legislature, is likely to force Young into a runoff after Tuesday's non-partisan balloting.

Marcus, although strong in the northside white precincts and popular with the downtown business community, has been hurt by disclosures that he paid more than $14,000 in late taxes and penalties on his business and home.

Jackson's 1973 race against Mayor Sam Massell was colored by Massell's contention that Atlanta was a city "too young to die" — which the black majority of voters took as a code phrase for racism. Jackson won and became the first black to be elected mayor of a large city in the Deep South.

This year's campaign has been free of overt racial references, but make-up of the city — slightly more than 50 percent black — and the tenor of Southern politics makes race an unavoidable factor.

Both Marcus and Young concede there is a "black" and "white" vote, but both men say that segment is relatively small.

Marcus took pains to set up a southside headquarters in the black belt early in his campaign and trumpeted endorsements by black fellow legislators. Jackson, endorsing Young from the pulpit of a black church, urged blacks not to give up the office they won with his election in 1973.

Young, whose supporters tried to make his congressional office a "black seat" in Congress but failed to elect another black candidate when Young went to the United Nations, has avoided direct racial appeals in his campaigning.

Fulton County Commissioner A. Reginald Eaves and state Rep. Mildred Glover, two other black candidates, have detracted from Young's following — while Republican Warren Shulman and businessman John Thompson may siphon some conservative support from Marcus.

No candidate has tried to make an issue of the murders of young blacks that kept the city on edge for almost two years, although crime generally is a top item in their debates.

Sunken treasure, cable TV among issues before court

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The ownership of sunken treasure and antitrust disputes — especially one involving the mushrooming cable television industry — are among the top business cases to be decided by the Supreme Court during its 1981-82 term, which opens today.

The cable case before the nine justices tests whether cities have the same immunity from antitrust suits that states enjoy. At issue is the right of Boulder, Colo., to impose a moratorium on expansion of a cable television system while officials studied alternative cable services.

Another pending antitrust controversy concerns a case that could hamper the operations of scores of professional and scientific associations.

The court must decide whether non-profit professional groups — in this case the American Society of Mechanical Engineers — are liable for damages if one of their volunteer members takes part in an anticompetitive conspiracy, under the guise of helping to set industrial codes and standards.

A third antitrust case focuses on whether the American Medical Association may be forced to change its ethical guidelines for physicians because they are anticompetitive.

On a more adventuresome note, the justices will resolve a dispute over ownership of more than $250 million in treasure recovered from a Spanish vessel that sank off the coast of Florida in the 17th century.

A lower court ruling, being challenged on appeal, declared the wreckage of the vessel Atocha to be outside Florida coastal waters and awarded its treasure to the private company that recovered it.

Closer to land, the court will review a case in which the federal government is accused of being unwilling to try leasing offshore lands for oil drilling under terms that could provide more revenue for the government and less for the oil companies.

Back on shore, the court has agreed to consider whether the International Longshoremen's Association violated labor contracts when its members refused to load ships bound for the Soviet Union.

The dispute pits shippers against the union for its refusal to handle exports bound for the Soviet Union as a protest against the Russian invasion of Afghanistan.

Other business-related cases pending before the high court include:

•A test of the constitutionality of an Indiana law that allows mineral rights for tracts of land to lapse if they have not been used for 20 years.

•A challenge to rulings that struck down provisions of Illinois' business takeover act, which imposes conditions on corporate acquisitions that can exceed those prescribed by federal law.

Fed should ease grip, Treasury chief thinks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Treasury Secretary Donald Regan, suggesting the current "flat period" in the economy may be a recession, says the Federal Reserve Board should loosen its reins on the nation's money supply.

Regan stressed he does not advocate "easy money" to stimulate the economy and reduce interest rates, but he told the Washington Post a "change has to be made."

"In this flat period, or indeed if it is later determined that this is a recession . . . the Fed has to go countercyclical rather than pro-cyclical," Regan said in an interview published Sunday.

"What I mean by that is that at times in the past it has seemed that in recessionary periods, at least for a while, the Fed has held on too tightly to the monetary reins," he said.

In the past, Regan and other top administration officials have been reluctant to criticize the Fed for pursuing a tight money approach to controlling inflation. But persistently high interest rates have decimated the housing industry and inflicted strong punishment on many smaller businesses such as auto dealerships. The economy as a whole has shown essentially no growth for the past eight months.

The Treasury Department, in a clarifying statement Sunday, said, "The administration is not suggesting any changes in policy, but rather that the Federal Reserve stick to its policy of steady monetary growth. The interview with the Post makes it clear that we are not calling for easy monetary policy, simply that the Fed should stay within the target range of monetary policy that it has chosen."

Regan declined to specify how the central bank should change its policies to increase the money supply to encourage a recovery.

"I'm not going to try to tell the Fed, since I am secretary of the Treasury and they're an independent group, what mechanisms to use in order to do this," he said.

But Regan told the Post the Fed must act to create "a sufficiency of money to enable the economy to recover nicely from its current flat period."

Regan conceded financial analysts already wary of continuing budget deficits and consequent federal borrowing despite President Reagan's austerity program — might react negatively to a looser money policy. Instead of lowering interest rates, a change might drive interest charges higher in anticipation of rekindled inflation.

"The Fed's actions could be misinterpreted and that's the danger of their easing too quickly on money, or too much," Regan said. "We wouldn't want that."

The Treasury chief stuck by the administration's projections of 5.2 percent growth in the economy during 1982, allowing for inflation. He predicted, "The recovery will start in the first quarter of 1982."

High Yield! Tax Free! Insured All Savers Certificates

Plus free fine china

Exempt up to $2,000 in taxes

Regardless of your tax bracket, the First Security Tax-Free Certificate lets you exempt savings interest from your federal income tax, up to $2,000 on a joint return ($1,000 on an individual return.)

How to spread tax benefit

By spacing your purchases between now and December 31st this year, and December 31, 1982, you can divide your tax-free benefit over the next two taxable years. You should plan now to purchase as many certificates as you require between today and December 31, 1982, when the government program terminates. There is a minimum deposit of $500, or as much more as you wish, for each Certificate.

Insured, high yield

Certificates are issued for a period of one year at a rate based on 70% of the yield of the most recent 52-week Treasury Bill auction. When the tax exemption is considered, this yield is an excellent return on your money, and safety is insured by the FDIC up to $100,000 per account. (Federal regulations stipulate: substantial interest penalty is required for early withdrawal; tax exemption is lost if account is closed before one year; certificates cannot be used for collateral.)

First Security bonus

The First Security bonus is a free place setting of elegant fine china in your choice of two distinctive patterns when you open a First Security Tax-Free Certificate with a deposit of $500 or more. Additional china available at reduced cost depending on amount of deposit.

Converting Money Market Certificates

It is permissible to redeem your present First Security Money Market Certificate before maturity, without penalty, if you reinvest in a First Security Tax-Free Certificate. Federal regulations prohibit moving these funds to another institution without incurring a penalty. We suggest you give careful thought to this option, and make a decision that is most beneficial to both your income and federal tax needs.

Annual yield

The annual effective yield is 12.14% for purchases made between now and October 31st. Interest may be withdrawn quarterly, or left to remain to maturity. If withdrawn quarterly, the actual yield would be 11.62% for the period between now and October 31st.

Dear Abby

Following Fire Prevention Week hints could save your life

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
© Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR READERS: It's Fire Prevention Week again, and I have had so many requests to repeat my column on fire prevention that it has become a tradition. So here it is, with updated figures:

Last year, 7,800 Americans died, and nearly 130,000 civilians, plus 100,000 firemen, were seriously injured in 3,000,000 fires.

The total fire loss last year in property alone was $5 1/2 billion in the U.S.

The chief causes of fires, in order of the toll taken, were:

1) Smoking
2) Electrical wiring
3) Heating and cooking equipment
4) Children playing with matches
5) Open flames and sparks
6) Flammable liquids
7) Suspected arson
8) Chimneys and flues
9) Lighting
10) Spontaneous ignition

Now for some tips that could save your life:

Be sure your cigarette is out. Matches, too. Never leave matches and lighters within the reach of children.

Don't run cords under rugs or over radiators where they may get damaged. Replace a cord if it is frayed.

Never leave small children or invalids alone in the house — not even for a few minutes.

Have your wiring and electrical installations done by a professional.

Store oily rags and paints in a cool place in tightly sealed metal containers.

Never use flammable liquids for dry-cleaning indoors.

Never smoke in bed.

Have a fire drill in your home to be sure everyone knows what to do in case of fire. Designate a specific meeting place outside so you will all know who's outside of the house.

Remember: Fire extinguishers put out 97 percent of all fires on which they were used, and most large fires start as small fires. So, invest in a compact, easy-to-use fire extinguisher. Keep it handy in your kitchen, or be prudent and buy one for your cottage, car, boat and the back bedroom.

Buy and install a smoke detector and then properly maintain it. It must be cleaned often with the vacuum cleaner hose so that it is dust-free. It is estimated that 6,000 lives could have been saved last year had a smoke detector been in service when the fire happened.

Now, in case of fire:

If you suspect fire, alert the rest of the household. But first feel the top of the door. If it's hot, don't open it. Escape through the window.

If you can't open the window, break it with a chair. Cover the rough edges with a blanket, sit on the window ledge with one leg hanging outside and one inside, and wait for help.

The phone number of your fire department should be taped on EVERY telephone. If it isn't, don't fumble around trying to find it. Get out and call from a neighbor's house.

If you live in an apartment building use the stairway. DON'T take a chance on the elevator. If it fails, you're trapped!

Once out, stay out. No treasure is worth risking your life for.

Big saving seen in plant deferrals

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Cancellations and deferrals of unneeded coal and nuclear plants will save utility customers as much as $70 billion in 1984, says a Library of Congress analysis done for Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.

"This analysis shows that not building those power plants may have saved consumers tens of billions of dollars in capital costs," Kennedy said in a statement.

The senator noted that utilities like to blame environmental groups who challenge nuclear projects for delays that cost their customers millions of dollars in extra costs for investment debt service.

But, he said, "This analysis shows that by forcing utilities to rethink their plans, environmentalists have saved consumers billions of dollars in unneeded power plant construction."

Carl Behrens, an energy specialist with the Library's Congressional Research Service, based his estimate of savings on a comparison of coal and nuclear generating costs by Gordon Corey and an Energy Department nuclear study.

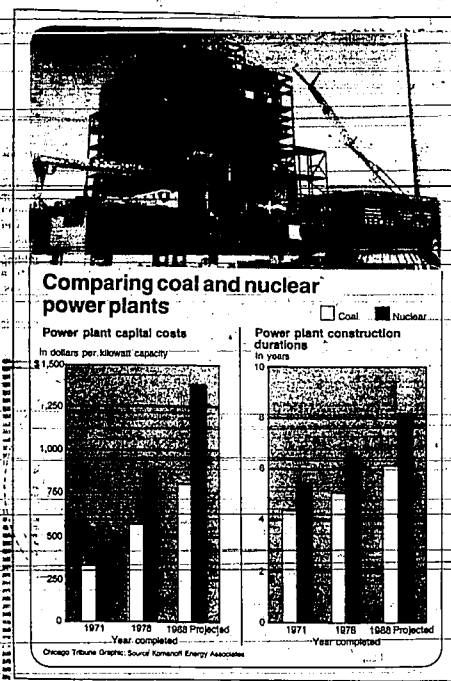

Adjusting for inflation, Behrens said, the two studies project a range of $1,150 to $1,390 per kilowatt hour for investment in nuclear plants in 1984 and $935 to $1,015 for investment in coal units.

The National Electric Reliability Council has reported that 33 nuclear reactors and 22 coal plants originally slated for operation by 1985 have been canceled, postponed indefinitely or deferred beyond 1990.

The cancellations, deferrals and postponements amounted to 36,127 megawatts of nuclear generating capacity and 12,566 megawatts of coal capacity.

Since the council report, the Bailly, Ind., reactor was canceled and four Tennessee Valley Authority reactors were deferred, bringing the nuclear total to 41,111 megawatts.

"Assuming 1984 as an average scheduled operation year for the units deferred or canceled, it can be concluded that construction of these plants would have required an investment of between $47 billion and $57 billion for nuclear plants and between $12 billion and $13 billion for coal plants," Behrens wrote in a memorandum to Kennedy.

'Third wave' Russians show off contributions

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (UPI) — Aristov the dancer, Rostropovich the cellist and Brodsky the poet, "third-wave" emigres of the past decade, were among those demonstrating their contributions to contemporary American culture at a small Pennsylvania college this weekend.

The two-day festival of artists from the Soviet Union was organized by Linda Weintraub, museum director at Muhlenberg College.

Ms. Weintraub said the first wave of Russian emigres came to the United States in the 1920s, the second after World War II and the third is still coming in.

Many battled extreme hardship to make their way to the West.

Pianist Alexander Peskanov said he and his brother were expelled from school in 1973 when their father applied for permission to leave Russia. Their father was fired from his job and Alexander found himself a prime candidate to be drafted into the Soviet army.

He said he feigned illness for seven months while the family subsisted on food scraped together by friends and music teachers.

Peskanov, 26 and his brother Mark, 23, a violinist, have won top honors in the Julliard School annual competition. Alexander has played in the London Symphony, the National Symphony in Washington, the St. Louis Symphony and the Julliard Orchestra.

"We have much more to share with this country than with Russia," he said.

Among the artists were dancers Anatole Aristov and Alexander Gudunov, cellist Olga Rostropovich, and the poet Joseph Brodsky reading his poetry.

Aristov, who danced with the Bolshoi Ballet in Moscow, now teaches at the Ballet Russe of Montreal.

"I like this life in the United States," he said. "It's dynamic. In one year I have more friends than in 40 years in Russia."

Alexander Nei, 42, a sculptor who emigrated in 1974 with his family, has seen his work exhibited in galleries along the East Coast and the window of Tiffany and Co. jewelers in New York.

"An artist's life is not easy," Nei said, but he declined to talk about the circumstances surrounding his departure from the Soviet Union. "I don't want to live in the past. I live for today."

Uncle Sam goes after bills of deadbeat kin

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Pity poor Uncle Sam. Not only will he soon be a trillion dollars in debt but he also has a lot of deadbeat nephews and nieces who owe him nearly $11 billion.

And of that, nearly $4 billion has been labeled "not collectible" by the Internal Revenue Service, according to figures released Sunday by Rep. Benjamin Rosenthal, D-N.Y.

The figures show that as of June 30, 1981, more than 5 million taxpayers were delinquent to the tune of $10.9 billion.

Of the total, more than $4.4 billion was due on accounts the IRS still considers "active." Accounts considered not collectible or not worth the cost of trying to collect, numbered almost 3 million and totaled $3.9 billion.

In addition to the $10.9 billion already declared delinquent, the IRS is sending out bills for another $5.7 billion on accounts it is about to classify as delinquent.

The number of taxpayers who fall behind in their payments appears to be growing. The IRS told Rosenthal it collected $6 billion in past due taxes during fiscal 1980, up from $4.9 billion in 1979 and $4.3 billion in 1978.

Thanks to new collection procedures, the IRS said, it now expects to get back $21 to $22 for each dollar it spends in trying to collect past due taxes.

For example, greater use will be made of telephone collection techniques that have proved to be "the most cost-beneficial way" to close delinquent accounts, the IRS told Rosenthal.

"The federal government has to collect every dollar legitimately due it," the congressman said in releasing the IRS figures.

"If IRS can get a return of $21 or $22 for every dollar spent, we should give it the resources necessary to collect what is due the government," he said.

Prison population up sharply

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. prison population jumped by more than 20,000 in the first half of 1981, forcing some states to use tents, prefabricated buildings and double bunking to house inmates.

State and federal prisons held almost 350,000 men and women inmates on June 30, 1981, more than 20,000 more than in 1980, a Justice Department report released Sunday said.

Prisons added more prisoners during the first half of 1981 than in all of the previous year. If the trend continues, the prison population will grow by more than 10 percent this year.

The number of federal prisoners rose by 1,370 during the first half of this year.

Most of the increase — nearly 19,000 inmates — occurred in state institutions, forcing some states to use "tents, prefabricated buildings, double bunking and early release" to cope with the swelling prison population, the report said.

The report said facilities in some states held almost twice their rated capacities and other states were relying heavily on space in local jails.

Last spring, the Supreme Court ruled that under certain conditions, states can put two inmates in a cell designed for one. But the court said states may do so only if other prison facilities and programs are adequate.

The increase in prison population comes at a time when the administration is focusing on ways to combat crime. Last week, President Reagan called for legal reforms that he said would make it easier to detain and convict criminal offenders.

In August, a special task force on violent crime recommended that the federal government spend $2 billion to help states build more prison facilities.

The latest Justice Department report said 14 states reported gains of more than 10 percent in their prison populations during the first half of the year. They are New Hampshire, New York, New Jersey, Indiana, North Dakota, Mississippi, Alabama, Oklahoma, Montana, Idaho, Utah, Washington, Alaska and Hawaii.

In an 18-month period including the latest six months, prison populations increased by 25 percent or more in North Dakota, Indiana, Hawaii, Alabama, Arizona and Alaska.

North Dakota had the highest increase in the 1½ years — 59 percent — which it attributed to the "boom atmosphere created by energy exploration," the report said.

Indiana, one of the states to abolish parole completely, had an inmate population that grew by 34 percent during the last 18 months, and now faces what state officials call a crisis, the report said.

"Indiana state prison authorities are admitting 100 more inmates each month than they release, and most state institutions are now at double their rated capacity," the report noted.

Former slave dies at 118

WASHINGTON (UPI) — William "Mac" Pinckney, a 118-year-old former slave and sharecropper died Thursday of arteriosclerosis at Southern Maryland Hospital Center.

Pinckney, who was born into slavery shortly before Emancipation in Croom, in southern Prince George's County, lived in Washington.

In a 1979 Washington Post story, Pinckney said his secret for a long life was "As long as I walk upright and keep his (God's) command, He will lengthen my days."

Pinckney told the Post his early days in slavery were like "a horror story."

"They used to beat my mother when she wouldn't do what they told her . . . and I better not have gotten mad when it happened," he said at his 116th birthday party in 1979.

Pinckney said slavery was a life "of harsh treatment, long hours and hard work in the tobacco, corn and wheat fields that often included indignities such as putting our food — usually milk and flour — on the floor and making us eat it."

He said the Ku Klux Klan "came and took our women and did with them what they wanted, and you couldn't do nothing about it."

But Pinckney said he didn't resent the mistreatment he received as a slave, explaining "If you don't know why I'm not bitter, read the Bible."

Pinckney helped build the first long room church in Croom, in which he later was married. Bertha Lee, his wife, died in 1955.

Pinckney was the father of 18 children, eight of whom survive.

Girl, 16, dies of wounds from fight

SALISBURY, Md. (UPI) — About 40 high school students watched as two female classmates slashed each other with knives in an after-school fight that resulted in the death of a 16-year-old girl, state police said Sunday.

No one in the crowd tried to stop the fight and one person handed one of the girls a knife after the girl had been stabbed, the trooper investigating the matter said.

Sheila A. Johnson, 15, of Salisbury, was charged with first-degree murder.

What's what

Takes a confident young lady to marry a lawyer. She'd better be intelligent, too. The practicing attorney works with legal secretaries, and good legal secretaries have to be skillful and bright. Said lawyer is bound to make comparisons. If his current wife doesn't measure up, he knows in his line of work how to get a new one. This is Item No. 9335 in our Love and War man's huge file on romance in the legal profession.

Q. How old is the average "lady of the night" now?

A. Typically, she's 20, white, unmarried, a high school dropout, a former runaway, and a lone operator who works without a procurer.

Observes George Burns: "I'm at an age when I have nothing to do with natural food. I need all the preservatives I can get."

Q. On what day of the week was actress Tuesday Weld born?

A. Thursday. Her real first name is Susan.

YOGI JOKE

If you don't like Little Moron jokes, Polish jokes or Texas Aggie jokes, then call it a Yogi Berra joke. He doesn't mind. Yogi went into a pizza parlor and ordered a small pie. Waitress: "Shall I cut it in eight pieces or four?" Yogi: "Four. I don't think I can eat eight."

Q. My husband never looks at another woman while he's in town, but I have reason to know that when he's on sales trips he picks up any tramp he can find and goes to dirty movies. Would you say he's "sclapodous"?

A. No, not that. The tendency to get lascivious away from home is called "ecdemolagnia." If your husband were "sclapodous," he'd have big feet, that's all.

DIANA

How many famous women named Diana come to mind? Prince Charles' wife, Princess Diana. Diana Ross. Diana Rigg. Curiously, all three of these have been known at one time or another as "Lady." The Princess, before the wedding. Ross when she starred in "Lady Sings the Blues," and Rigg, when she played in "The Great Muppet Caper."

Q. Country western singer Merle Haggard did time at San Quentin in 1958. But wasn't he pardoned?

A. He was. Long after his release and parole service. In 1972, then California Governor Ronald Reagan signed a full pardon.

LEARN TO FISH

Walter Matthau told a columnist he just wanted to float out to sea in a rowboat loaded with fishing lines and books. Playwright Neil Simon later asked Matthau, who stars in the forthcoming movie version of Simon's "I Ought To Be In Pictures," whether he wanted to fish or read. "Both," said Matthau. "The books I'll take will teach me how to fish. I never went fishing in my damned life."

OVERPRICED HOTELS

Luxury hotels in the United States may be pricing themselves into trouble, says Michael A. Leven, executive vice president of American Hotels, which operates 40 hotels. He says too many luxury hotels have raised their room rates and their restaurant prices — he termed breakfast prices of $5.95 to $8.95 "ridiculous" — much faster than inflation warrants, without offering improved services. "The high prices are causing occupancy to drop somewhat alarmingly except during peak periods," Leven says. "I think the average occupancy rate may go down to 68 precent next year and if it falls to the low 60s an awful lot of hotels are going to be in trouble," and current high profits could turn out to be "just a slow ride to the cemetery."

Lunch breaks old book theft case

NEW YORK (UPI) — An international manhunt and a lunch at an Ivy League college club resulted in the arrest of a Greek graduate student suspected of stealing antique books valued at $2 million, officials said Sunday.

Federal authorities said John Papanastassiou, 34, a Greek citizen who has been studying economics at Columbia University since 1978, was arrested Friday and charged with stealing four rare books dating to the 16th and 17th centuries.

The four volumes, including a 1638 edition of Galileo's "Discorsi," were stolen this summer from the library of the University College in London. They were discovered missing two weeks ago.

Officials said the four books were among 267 antique books on science and medicine stolen from the college and that Papanastassiou was regarded as a suspect in connection with the theft. The collection is valued at $2 million.

Papanastassiou, charged with transporting and seeking to sell stolen goods, said at his court arraignment that he had been suffering from psychiatric problems in America. He was ordered held in lieu of $25,000 bond.

Papanastassiou was arrested following an international investigation that involved Scotland Yard, Interpol, U.S. Customs and a helpful Manhattan antique bookseller.

U.S. Customs spokesman Dennis Murphy said agents hastily set up an undercover operation with the bookseller late Thursday following a tip from London police.

The bookseller told authorities he had been contacted several times by Papanastassiou since last March and had agreed to consider buying the four books for $11,000 in a meeting Tuesday. The bookseller also said Papanastassiou had used different aliases in each conversation.

The four books were valued at $25,000.

In the undercover scheme, the bookseller met the suspect over lunch Friday at the Princeton Club. At the meal, Murphy said the bookseller, who was wearing a bulletproof vest, exchanged $11,000 in cash for a "package deal" of four volumes.

When the lunch was completed, agents arrested Papanastassiou.

A description of Papanastassiou has also matched that of a suspect who visited the library of the British university, authorities said. Murphy said the suspect could face extradition to Great Britian.

The "Discorsi" was Galileo's last great work and was printed in the Netherlands because the Roman Catholic Church would not allow it to be printed in Italy.

Emphasis during Fire Prevention Week

Fire officials campaign for home safety

By STEVE LIPSON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — National Fire Prevention Week, which began Sunday, marks the start of an effort by local officials to get smoke detectors installed in all Twin Falls homes.

Walt Roberts, an inspector and the fire educator for the Twin Falls Fire Department, says the Fire Department, several independent insurance agents in the city and a group of senior citizens have teamed up to sponsor a sale of $21 smoke detectors for about $6.

"We're not trying to make a big sale," Roberts says. No one will make a profit selling smoke detectors at that price, he says.

"We're trying to save lives. These darn smoke detectors work. They save lives."

Last year during National Fire Prevention Week, firefighters went door-to-door through the city, distributing fire safety and prevention information. They also did a smoke-detector survey and found that slightly less than half of the 2,000 homes they visited had detectors, Roberts says.

There are about 10,000 houses within the city limits, Roberts says, so fire officials hope to sell several thousand smoke detectors.

The money to discount the price of the detectors will come from a fund maintained by the independent insurance agents in Twin Falls, Roberts says. They make it a practice to donate a portion of their commissions to a special fund that is used to finance community projects, he says.

Fire officials also needed help in taking orders and collecting money for the detectors. Senior citizens, through the Twin Falls Senior Citizens Center, offered their assistance, Roberts says.

Notices of the sale, and order blanks, will be sent out through the schools. Other methods will be announced for people without school-age children who want to place orders, Roberts says.

Information about where to effectively place the smoke detectors in a home also will be distributed. Roberts hopes to begin taking orders this week.

Other projects during Fire Prevention Week will include firefighters again going door-to-door to distribute information. They also will present programs in schools, teaching children how fires behave. For example, Roberts says, the children will see a demonstration of how vapors travel, so they can understand why an open gasoline can is a fire hazard.

In addition, fire-safety exhibits by students from several schools will be displayed at the Blue Lakes Mall, Roberts says. Saturday, those displays will be judged by a committee of mall merchants, teachers and one Twin Falls Fire Department engine company. A $60 prize will go to the winners.

Through work in Basic Skills Academy

'Closet' teachers put talents to work

By GLEN WARCHOL
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Go into a school and find a good teacher.

Peel away the bachelor's degree in education. Unwrap the master's or specialist degree.

What you have left is a spark of talent that has nothing to do with education or background.

Many people with the talent have never stood before a classroom of eager students. And although these people don't think of themselves as teachers, deep down, they often have the urge to teach.

Donya Hoch is one of these "closet" teachers who has found an outlet for her skills. She teaches adults on a one-to-one basis for the Basic Skills Academy, which aids adults who, for whatever reason, want to improve their basic educational skills.

Although she never attended college, Hoch has a good grasp of the basics of teaching reading. Part of it comes from the crash course she was given by the Basic Skills Academy, the rest from her natural aptitude to teach.

"We use a lot of experience stories," Hoch says. "You basically have the student tell you the story, then you work with the words he uses himself."

Dave Urrabazo, her student, is a crew chief in a Department of Energy winterization program. In the short run, Urrabazo wants to brush up on his math and reading skills — the math to help him figure the insulation needs of the houses he winterizes, the reading to handle the complicated government forms that go with the job.

But Urrabazo also has a long-range goal. A high school dropout, he wants to get his graduate equivalency diploma, which is necessary for him to enter the College of Southern Idaho.

"I wanted to quit school to see what it was like," Urrabazo says, shaking his head. "I should have kept on going."

Urrabazo wants to go into automobile mechanics at CSI, and he knows the Basic Skills Academy could be his only opportunity to get the GED.

Urrabazo was evaluated by the program's community coordinator, and the results were explained to Hoch. This gave her an accurate assessment of her student's education level and an understanding of his interests.

"All Dave really needs is practice," she says. "His (reading) comprehension is excellent."

Control of the educational process in the Basic Skills Academy is in the hands of the student; he learns what he feels he needs.

"They set their own goals," says Hoch. "Some people go into it to get a chance for a better job. Like by studying for the GED, that prepares you to open a lot of doors to jobs."

Hoch thinks that the one-to-one tutoring that is the main component of the Basic Skills academy is what makes it an excellent program.

"You can really get to know your student and help him in little ways — things that he's going to come up against everyday, like checkbooks and contracts," she says.

Carole Sheridan, the director of the academy, which is in its first year of operation, says that the basic goal is to give adults, 16 and over, the opportunity to improve their skills in reading, writing and math — and English as a second language.

Tutors, ranging in age from 20 to 70, are given eight hours of teacher training and two hours of specific orientation on how to tutor adults.

All teaching, she said, is done on a one-to-one basis. A tutor and a student work together for 50 hours. Then, the tutors decide if they want another student, to continue with their present student or to quit.

The program has centers in Twin Falls, Burley, Gooding and Jerome to serve those cities and outlying areas. One of the keys to the success of the program, Sheridan says, is that local people are used as community coordinators, whose job is to test the students and guide the tutors through their first weeks of teaching.

If you think you've got a gift for teaching, the Basic Skills Academy will quickly polish it and start you as a tutor. For more information, call the academy at 733-9554, extension 360 or 354.

Les Stimpson of the Idaho State Police fires a round at Sunday's annual Peace Officer's Travelling Trophy Shoot

Firemen 'smoke' competition in trap shoot

TWIN FALLS — The smell of gun smoke mixed with the crisp canyon air Sunday, as city firefighters taught local police officers how to shoot.

Apparently, there's some relationship between swinging fire hoses and swinging shotguns, because the Fire Department "smoked" the competition at the annual Peace Officers Traveling Trophy Trap Shoot at the Twin Falls Rod and Gun Club.

With terrible monotony, the firefighters mercilessly broke, crumbled or outright vaporized 213 of the 250 fleeing clay targets.

Each participant had two rounds of 25 shots each.

Fred Webb was the high scorer for the Fire Department, missing only one target with scores of 24 and 25.

City police took second place by hitting 166 of the ceramic birds. Dave Heideman led his team with a score of 19/21.

The Idaho State Police were close behind, hitting 163 targets. Walt Hamby led the troopers with a score of 19/22.

Dogged by broken swings, the county sheriff's deputies came in last, with a score of 152. Jim Hopkins led the deputies with a score of 15/21.

"We practiced a lot more than they did," said Capt. Fred Webb of the Fire Department, trying to keep a straight face. "We're a lot more serious shooters."

Mr. and Mrs. Leon Littlefield of Hansen donated $400 to start the scholarship fund in honor of their son. The CSI Aggie Club matched that donation. CSI rodeo coach Shawn Davis said funds still are being collected from other people who wish to contribute.

Nampa man shot fatally

NAMPA (UPI) — A Nampa man was shot to death Saturday night in a Nampa apartment, but no arrests were made Sunday in connection with the incident.

Nampa Police Detective Capt. Glendon Crawforth identified the dead man as Nathan Pooley, 18.

Detectives Sunday were attempting to determine who fired the shot and whether it was accidental, Crawforth said.

Early Sunday, police questioned the tenant of the apartment in which Pooley's body was found, Crawforth said. The tenant's name was not released.

Other people in the building were questioned by police later Sunday, a spokesman for the police department said, but no arrests had been made.

The shooting was reported to police at 9:27 p.m.

Pooley died of a single gunshot wound to the chest, Crawforth said. The shot was fired by a large-caliber rifle, he said.

The victim was dead when police arrived at the scene, Crawforth said.

Andrus blasts Watt claims about public land policies

CECIL ANDRUS
...says claims untrue

BOISE (UPI) — Interior Secretary James Watt's claims that past administrations have pursued public land policies contrary to the best interest of the nation are a "damn lie," former Interior Secretary Cecil D. Andrus said Saturday.

The former Idaho governor said Watt — and those Reagan administration officials who contend too much land has been reserved for national parks and wilderness — are attempting to convince the American people that quick action is needed to open up the country's 760 million acres of public land for oil and gas exploration, increased timber harvesting and grazing.

But he told about 150 members of the Idaho Conservation League the Reagan administration's "rhetoric of an alleged public land lock-up" is false.

"What substance is there, if any, to the current rhetoric alleging that we have enough parks for all time, that the public land has been badly managed, that there is a lock-up . . . exactly what supposedly has been taking place," Andrus asked. "I'm here to tell you it's a damn lie."

And he claimed "some powerful interests are behind his (Watt's) door" pushing for "continued exploitation of the public lands."

Andrus said administration officials advocating increased development on public land have resorted to "browbeating" and "name-calling" against those conservationists who are protesting the proposals.

"Anybody that would stand up to them for a minute, (they) end up calling an extremist," he said. "They're using this to try to silence some of the people who are concerned. Be careful. Think about who they are talking about."

He said those who claim only radical environmentalists support conservation issues are not accurately relating history. They're actually attacking members of both political parties who have supported conservation legislation over the years, he said.

He said Democratic and Republican Congresses and presidents of both political parties have endorsed legislation creating wilderness areas, national parks and limiting minerals exploration.

"It's not a donkey versus elephant issue," Andrus said. "It's a situation where we have to understand they're trying to get the people to believe it so they can stampede the Congress" for changes in national policy.

Andrus warned league members to be wary of the "gross exaggerations" he said were being used to convince the American people of the need for policy changes. He cited an American Mining Congress publication, which said 520 million acres in America are not open to development.

That figure includes 75 million acres devoted to national parks, he said, 90 million acres turned over to the Alaska natives and that state last year and all the federal land devoted to military installations and Indian reservations.

He said the 760 million acres of public land in the U.S. amounts to 1.2 percent of the total acreage in the lower 48 states — or 4.9 percent if Alaska is included.

"Is that too much to leave to our children," he asked. "When our children look at that down the line, they're going to wonder where the rest of it went . . . I don't think it's enough."

ICL demands Reagan fire Watt

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Conservation League passed a resolution Saturday calling on President Reagan to remove Interior Secretary James Watt.

At the statewide group's annual meeting in Boise, members endorsed the resolution submitted by Boise Gary Richardson. The resolution accused Watt of "discriminatory favoring of those who make money from the use of the nation's public lands and disregard of conservation issues.

The delegates also endorsed a resolution affirming the group's opposition to an open-pit molybdenum mine in Idaho's White Cloud Mountains. ASARCO Inc. possesses claims in the area and has indicated an interest in developing roadways to those claims.

That resolution also opposed "any other major mining activity in the White Clouds."

"We reiterate our support for wilderness designation for the 230,000-acre Boulder-White Clouds roadless area," it said.

The group also endorsed a "reasonable mineral severance tax" for the state and urged lawmakers to approve such a measure.

Opposition to the Idaho Transportation Department's plans to improve U.S. Highway 12 along the Lochsa River also was voiced in another resolution. That resolution was amended, however, to say the group opposed highway work until an environmental impact statement is completed on the proposed project.

The league also urged the U.S. Forest Service to recommend the 30,000-acre Long Canyon area in the Panhandle National Forest for wilderness designation. Members said the area is a prime habitat for mountain caribou and grizzly bear.

Another resolution voiced support for the Idaho Public Utilities Commission's efforts to encourage energy conservation & and for "vigorous pursuit and promotion by Idaho's utilities of small power generation production . . . cogenerated power and conservation."

U of I president appoints 8-man advisory board for resource unit

MOSCOW (UPI) — An eight-member advisory council for the Idaho portion of the Institute for Resource Management, initiated by actor-director Robert Redford, has been named by University of Idaho President Richard Gibb.

The committee, which includes three Idaho legislators, three people who work with resources in the state, an environmental consultant and a retired professor, probably will advise the institute on resource management issues, suggest changes in curriculum and rate the quality of the program's graduates, Gibb said.

The committee members are Jack Pierce, a rancher from Malta; Tom Richards of Idaho Forest Industries, Inc., Coeur d'Alene; Rep. Kitty Gurnsey, R-Boise; Sen. Kermit Klebert, D-Hope; Rep. Rich Orme, R-St. Anthony; Morian Nelson, a falconer and environmental consultant, Boise; Phil Soulen, a rancher from Weiser; William F. Boyd, a Kellogg attorney; and Don J. Obee, retired head of the biological sciences department at Boise State University.

The institute is based jointly on the UI and Washington State University campuses, which are eight miles apart, but the council only will advise the UI component.

Gibb emphasized the council is advisory and that final selection of students and curriculum will be up to the university.

"I will be calling a meeting of the council in the next couple of weeks," Gibb said. "I want to know how the council feels about current resource issues, and I want them to make sure that the institute isn't insulated from real resource problems."

Gibb said in choosing members for the committee, he tried to select people who represented a cross-section of views from the state.

The institute was scheduled to accept its first 20 students Sept. 1. However, funding problems have delayed the institute's opening, which is now scheduled to open in January. The money is to be raised from a variety of sources either by Redford himself or by a fund-raising firm.

Each of the 20 students will receive a $10,000 stipend to attend the institute.

Power panel set to report

BOISE (UPI) — Robert Saxvik, one of Idaho's representatives on the Northwest Power Planning Council, and three other council members will present the group's first annual report to Congress this week.

Saxvik, vice president of the council, will join Council Chairman Dan Evans of Washington and council members Roy Hemingway of Oregon and Keith Colburn of Montana today and Tuesday in briefing key congressmen and senators on the council's progress since its inception in April.

Under the provisions of the Northwest Electric Power Planning and Conservation Act of 1980, the council must prepare a 20-year conservation and supply plan, an energy demand forecast and a fish and wildlife management plan for Idaho, Montana, Oregon and Washington.

Under the act, the council is required to prepare an annual report for Congress by Oct. 1 each year. The report will be issued to the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee and the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee.

Over the two-day period, the council representatives will meet with Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho; Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Oregon; and Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Washington.

Driggs man dies when car overturns

IDAHO FALLS (UPI) — A 19-year-old Driggs man was killed early Sunday in a one-car roll-over on State Highway 33 near Driggs.

Teton County sheriff's officers identified the victim as Ralph Claude Hatch.

Authorities said the car Hatch was driving was traveling at an excessive rate of speed when it failed to make a curve. Hatch — apparently — overcorrected the vehicle and it rolled 2½ times, officers said.

Hatch was ejected from the vehicle and thrown 33 feet. He died at 3:19 a.m. at the scene of the accident of a broken neck, officers said.

A passenger, James Rasmussen, 20, also of Driggs, was listed in fair and stable condition.

St. Louis quarterback Jim Hart fires a pass over airborne Cowboy Guy Brown Sunday

Cards spoil Dallas' unblemished record

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Charlie Waters, the Dallas Cowboys' veteran safety, said the drive that led to the St. Louis Cardinals' winning field goal Sunday was vintage Jim Hart.

"The thing that hurt us was Hart's ability to cut us up like a surgeon in the last series," said Waters after the Cardinals defeated the Cowboys, 20-17. "He knew exactly what he wanted to do."

"It seemed almost like he'd rather have it that way than be 20 points ahead."

The score was tied 17-17 and 4:28 remained when St. Louis put the ball into play at its own 22 following a punt and a 15-yard unsportsmanlike conduct penalty on Timmy Newsome.

On the first play, Hart threw 20 yards to tight end Doug Marsh, who made a leaping, fingertip grab.

Hart called Ottis Anderson's number on the next play, and he carried over the right side for 8 yards. Another Anderson run netted 2 yards, and two plays later Hart hit Roy Green for a 19-yard completion to the Dallas 30.

After the two-minute warning, two running plays which totaled 5 yards were sandwiched between a false start penalty against St. Louis. Wayne Morris ran for 4 yards and Hart tried a draw to Anderson on 3rd-and-10, but he came up a yard short of the first down.

Neil O'Donoghue trotted out and calmly kicked a 37-yard field goal with 23 seconds on the clock to give St. Louis its victory over the previously undefeated Cowboys, who had beaten the Cardinals seven straight times.

"You can't be too hyped up about it," O'Donoghue said of his kick. "You gotta control your emotions. It's like a golf swing. I didn't try to rush it. Everything was under control as far as I was concerned."

Every member of the Cardinals got a game ball for the win, which gave them a 2-3 mark.

"It's truly a team effort," said Hart. "Each third of the team had their backs to the wall and had to respond — the offense getting the ball into position, the special teams kicking it and the defense holding them."

Danny White attempted to pass the Cowboys into field-goal position as the final seconds ticked off, but the St. Louis defense sacked him twice and the drive ended at the Dallas 37.

Hart finished with 16 completions in 29 attempts for 199 yards and a touchdown.

Danny White was 15-of-28 for 182 yards for Dallas with Butch Johnson catching five of those passes for 101 yards.

Tony Dorsett had run for 100 yards against St. Louis in five previous games but was held one yard shy of that mark Sunday, picking up 99 yards on 21 carries.

Green, who doubles as a wide receiver and defensive back for St. Louis, gave the Cardinals a 17-10 edge early in the third quarter with a one-handed grab of a 30-yard touchdown pass from Hart. Green finished with five receptions for 89 yards.

Dallas moved to the St. Louis 6, but rookie cornerback Jeff Griffin ended that threat with an end-zone interception of a White pass.

St. Louis returned the favor, with Hart throwing an interception to rookie safety Michael Downs, who returned it 23 yards to the St. Louis 21. White then threw a screen pass to Dorsett, who ran 11 yards untouched for a score to tie the game 17-17 going into the final quarter.

Rafael Septien kicked a 26-yarder midway through the second quarter to tie it 10-10 at the half. The field goal followed a fumble by Anderson with Ed Jones recovering for Dallas at the St. Louis 25.

O'Donoghue had given the Cardinals a 10-7 lead late in the first quarter with a 19-yard field goal that capped a 67-yard drive.

St. Louis took advantage of a fumble on the opening kickoff to take a 7-0 lead only 18 seconds into the game. Eric Williams hit James Jones and the ball popped loose with O'Donoghue coming up with it at the Dallas 9.

On the next play, Wayne Morris bolted into the end zone for the score.

Dallas tied it with a 93-yard drive in only four plays. Dorsett raced 36 yards, and White hit Johnson with a 48-yard pass to the 9. Dorsett swept 7 yards around left end for the score.

World champ Raiders defeated again in NFL's fifth week

Broncos generate little offense, but Oakland gets even less

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) — Obviously Dan Reeves was delighted his Denver Broncos shut out the Oakland Raiders Sunday 17-0 and especially so since the team managed only 252 yards in total offense.

"Our game plan didn't exactly shake up the Raiders," the Broncos' rookie coach said, "because they adjusted very well. When you can win while gaining only 252 yards, that's a pretty good day."

The Broncos, scoring their fourth victory in five starts, picked up 162 yards rushing — 73 from Rick Parros and 70 from Dave Preston — and their quarterbacks, Craig Morton and Steve DeBerg, pierced the tough Oakland defense for only 90 yards, but four Raider turnovers gave them their chance.

Fred Steinfort converted a fumble recovery into a 31-yard field goal and Parros ran 20 yards for a touchdown after a pass interception, both scores coming in the third quarter, for the points that made it an easy victory.

The shutout was the second in a row for the floundering Raiders, the first time that has happened to them since the opening two games of the 1961 season. Before 1981, the club had been shut out only four times in 21 years.

"We're beating ourselves, plain and simple," Raider Coach Tom Flores said. "We can't make as many mistakes as we did against a good defensive club like Denver."

The Raiders had seven fumbles, four of which they lost, and Jim Plunkett and Marc Wilson were intercepted once each. Oakland had a total offense of 168 yards, 90 passing and 78 running.

The Raider defense played a lot better game than the score might indicate, sacking Morton seven times. But the veteran quarterback, who completed 17-of-18 passes against San Diego last week, kept bouncing back with key completions and finished with 9-of-16 for 62 yards.

Plunkett had one of the poorest days of his Raider career, completing 13 of 29 passes for only 83 yards.

Wilson took over for him in the final quarter and was no mystery to the Denver defense.

"I've got to play better," Plunkett said as he shouldered the blame for Oakland's sudden lack of offense. "My job is to get us into the end zone, and I'm not doing it."

Preston scored his TD at the end of a 55-yard, nine-play drive late in the first half to put the Broncos on top 7-0 and, as things turned out, that was the only score they needed.

But the Raiders helped them immeasurably in the second half when they seemingly broke down every time they had a chance.

Punt return specialist Ira Matthews fumbled a three times, one of which was converted into Steinfort's field goal six minutes in the second half to put Denver ahead 10-0. Before the period was over, Bill Thompson intercepted a pass by Plunkett and Parros converted that mistake into Denver's final score, running 20 yards through the Oakland line and breaking three tackles en route.

Kenny King fumbled twice, but nothing came of those mistakes. In all, the Raiders turned the ball over six times and only had one chance to score. That was on the final play of the first half when Chris Bahr was short on a 54-yard field goal.

Haden hits stride in Los Angeles' 27-16 triumph over Browns

By United Press International

Pat Haden struggled for three weeks but he has finally found the groove along with his Los Angeles Rams teammates.

Haden led the Rams to a 27-16 victory over the Cleveland Browns at Anaheim Sunday, engineering several long drives and completing his first seven passes.

"We did a good job of controlling the ball and that was the key," he said. "Our offensive line did a super job all day long. They allowed me to stand back there with all day to throw.

"This team has come a long way in the last four weeks. I think that is attributable to a change in attitude. I feel very good about this team. They only thing that bothers me is that we're not 5-0."

Wendell Tyler ran for one touchdown and scored another on a pass and Frank Corral kicked a pair of field goals to lead the Rams' attack.

Tyler, who left the game late in the third quarter with a groin injury, scored on a two-yard run and a one-yard pass from Haden.

Los Angeles scored its other points on a four-yard TD run by Mike Guman and Corral's field goals of 38 and 41 yards.

Bills 23, Colts 17

At Orchard Park, N.Y., Joe Cribbs broke runs of 19 yards or longer on four separate scoring drives to lead Buffalo over Baltimore.

Cribbs' runs set up a Joe Ferguson-to-Jerry Butler touchdown pass, a 1-yard scoring plunge by Roosevelt Leaks and field goals of 34 and 44 yards by Nick Mike-Mayer. Mike-Mayer also kicked a 45-yard field goal.

Baltimore scored on touchdown passes by Bert Jones to Roger Carr and Ray Butler and a 32-yard field goal by Mike Wood.

Cribbs, whose longest run of the season coming into the game was 14 yards, finished with 159 yards on 17 carries, his best day as a pro.

Vikings 24, Bears 21

At Bloomington, Minn., Tommy Kramer fired two touchdown passes, including a 15-yard toss to Ahmad Rashad and the Minnesota defense held off a late rally by Chicago.

The Bears, who trailed 17-0 in the second quarter, had a chance to send the game into overtime, but Hans Nellsen was wide left with a 27-yard field goal attempt with one second left in the game.

Kramer, who completed 20-of-38 passes for 223 yards, hit Rashad in the second quarter to open the 17-0 lead and after the Bears closed to 17-14, he tossed an 11-yard TD pass to Joe Senser in the third period.

49ers 30, Redskins 17

At Washington, Dwight Hicks returned a fumble 80 yards for one touchdown and ran an interception back 32 yards for another Sunday to lead San Francisco over Washington, the only winless team in the league.

McEnroe, Tanner help U.S. complete Davis sweep; Argentina next

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — John McEnroe overcame a shaky first set to defeat Peter McNamara 9-7, 6-0 and Roscoe Tanner rallied for a 3-6, 6-2, 6-3 victory over Mark Edmondson Sunday to give the United States a 5-0 sweep of its Davis Cup semifinal series with Australia.

The American team moves on to the championship series against Argentina Dec. 11-13 at an undetermined site in the U.S. The Argentines, led by Guillermo Vilas and Jose Luis Clerc, completed a 5-0 sweep of their semifinal against Great Britain Sunday in Buenos Aires.

"I'm looking forward to playing Argentina," McEnroe said. "On paper, it's the toughest (matchup for the U.S.). But if we play well, I think we can win every match."

A victory over Argentina would give the Americans their third Davis Cup title in four years and their 27th championship in the 81-year history of the cup.

Tanner finished the American sweep of Australia with his come-from-behind victory. He got back into the match in the sixth and seventh games of the second set when he broke Edmondson's serve for the first time and then held his own serve after falling behind 15-40.

The third consecutive sellout crowd in Portland's Memorial Coliseum roared its approval in the final game of the match when Tanner again bounced back from a 0-30 deficit to hold serve and close out Edmondson 6-3.

Despite an occasional show of temper from McEnroe, the crowd remained solidly behind the Americans throughout the three-day series.

"You wouldn't think that Portland would be a great place to play a match," McEnroe said. "But it turned out the crowd was behind us and it was really good to play here. I couldn't ask for any more."

McEnroe appeared to be in danger of losing the first set when McNamara broke his serve to take a 7-6 lead. But the hot-tempered American bounced back with several sizzling service returns in the next game, including a forehand winner at 30-40, to tie the set 7-7.

It was the first of nine straight games won by McEnroe, as the Australian appeared to lose heart.

McEnroe kept his temper in check throughout the match, unlike his outburst the previous day in a doubles match with Peter Fleming against McNamara and Phil Dent of Australia. The match was held up for several minutes when the two Americans protested a line call upheld by the umpire.

U.S. team captain Arthur Ashe was very upset over the behavior of his two players, calling the incident his worst experience as a player or captain in Davis Cup competition.

Ashe said Sunday he held private talks with both McEnroe and Fleming but refused to reveal what was said. However, Ashe added that McEnroe definitely would play for the U.S. in the finals against Argentina later this year.

McEnroe, who defeated Edmondson in straight sets Friday to open the semifinal series, lost his serve for the first time during the competition in the opening game of his match against McNamara.

The reigning Wimbledon and U.S. Open champ, ranked No. 1 in the world, had trouble getting his first serve in play throughout the match. McEnroe fought off seven more break points during the first set until he blew an easy volley in game 13 to hand McNamara a 7-6 advantage.

But the 26-year-old Australian was unable to hold his next serve and contributed to his downfall two games later with a pair of unforced errors from the baseline as McEnroe took the first set 9-7.

The second set was dominated by the 22-year-old American, who was much sharper on his service returns and ground strokes.

Manager Torre receives awaited axe from Mets on season's last day

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Joe Torre, who had been expecting the news, was fired as manager of the New York Mets Sunday along with his entire coaching staff.

Torre was informed of his dismissal 3½ hours before the Mets' final game of the season with the Montreal Expos by Frank Cashen, the club's chief executive officer, in Cashen's office at Shea Stadium.

Cashen began by telling Torre, "Something like this is never easy."

Torre, who managed the Mets longer than any of his seven predecessors in the club's history, taking over for Joe Frazier on May 31, 1977, made it easy for Cashen. He knew what Cashen was going to tell him. Before leaving his home in New Jersey Sunday morning, Torre had told his wife Dani that he probably was going to be fired on this day.

"I said, 'Fine,'" Torre explained, in relating his brief, five-minute conversation with Cashen. "I didn't ask him for a reason. I told him a few months ago if he wanted to fire me, he should go ahead and do it because that was reason enough. The only thing I didn't want to hear was a lot of excuses. When you get into that it gets a little sloppy."

Torre said he had "no regrets" over the way he had handled the Mets, even though he occasionally was charged with being too "soft" on the players.

"I was me; whatever that is defined as," he said. "I was tough when I had to be. I managed my way, and right, wrong, or indifferent, I have no one else to look for excuses."

Cashen said, "My feelings are simply this: I felt we had to make a change. We had to go in a different direction. As to who our new manager will be, frankly I haven't made up my mind yet. I do have a list of names and our new manager should be named before the winter meetings the first week in December."

Under Torre, the Mets finished last in the National League East in the first half of the season, and although they made a run at a playoff spot in the second half, they were in fifth place, 6½ games behind the Montreal Expos before the season's final game Sunday.

Along with Torre, coaches Bob Gibson, Rube Walker, Chuck Cottier, Deron Johnson, and Joe Pignatano also were let go.

Torre, who still has one more year remaining on his contract, revealed he had told the coaches that they would be dismissed Saturday.

The late Gil Hodges had the second-longest Mets managerial tenure behind Torre, handling the club from 1968-71.

With the arrival of slugger Dave Kingman and veteran hitter Rusty Staub, Torre was excited about his club's prospects for the 1981 season, but things quickly went sour and it quickly became apparent "Mets Magic" was not back at Shea Stadium. Veteran right-hander Craig Swan and heralded rookie pitcher Tim Leary were early members of the disabled list and left-hander Randy Jones, acquired from San Diego in the off-season, got off to a miserable 0-5 start.

Kingman and Staub struggled at the plate and in the field and attendance remained lackluster as the Mets sunk out of contention early in the highly competitive NL East.

Torre, 41, a Brooklyn, N.Y., native, took himself off New York's active roster 18 days after taking over the manager's reins from Frazier and guided the club to a 49-68 record in his initial season as manager.

The Mets finished in sixth place in the division the following two seasons as well, compiling records of 65-96 and 63-99. The deRoulet family, which had owned the Mets from their inception, sold the club for a record $21 million to a group headed by Nelson Doubleday in January 1980 and the Mets played 47-39 ball from mid-May to mid-August to boost their record to 56-57 on August 14.

A series of crippling injuries to the starting rotation and the infield quickly burst the Mets' bubble, however, and New York finished with a 67-95 mark, escaping the division cellar into fifth place.

"In 1981 with all of our people back healthy and our new additions, I'm sure we will give our fans more to cheer about this summer," said Torre before the 1981 season.

As the losses continued to mount like a tidal wave, players started bickering and criticizing each other. After a May 12 loss in San Diego, losing pitcher Pat Zachry, the anchor of the depleted staff, complained publicly about the team's shoddy defense.

Torre's playing career was markedly more successful than his managerial stay with the Mets. A right-handed hitter, Torre was selected to the NL All-Star team nine times at three different positions: catcher, first base and third base.

Many of the Mets players expressed regret over Torre's firing.

Reds feel 'cheated' out of postseason action

By United Press International

Mario Soto's brilliant one-hitter failed to soothe Cincinnati Reds' manager John McNamara's bitter feelings about his club failing to qualify for post-season play in the National League.

"I'm bitter, very bitter about what happened to our team," McNamara said after Soto blanked the Atlanta Braves 3-0 in Sunday's finale at Cincinnati.

"We were cheated and we were deprived," he said, pointing out the Reds won 66 games, more than any other club in the majors, but still had not made it to the playoffs.

"The reality of it hasn't sunk in yet," he said, "but I feel bad for our players, our organization and our fans."

The Houston Astros will meet the Los Angeles Dodgers for the National League West crown. Cincinnati finished second in both halves of the split season in the NL West.

Soto, 12-9, fanned nine and walked two in outpitching Tommy Boggs, 3-13. The Braves' lone hit was Chris Chambliss' lead off single in the second as Soto set down the final 16 Atlanta batters in order.

The Reds took a 1-0 lead in the first inning on singles by Dave Collins, Householder and Dave Concepcion. Cincinnati added a pair of runs in the fourth on George Foster's single, Ray Knight's RBI double and a run-scoring single by Mike O'Berry.

Both benches emptied onto the field in the seventh after center fielder Dale Murphy's perfect throw to the plate on Larry Biittner's line drive nailed Paul Householder. Catcher Larry Owen applied a hard tag and Householder took exception, although no blows were struck.

New York 2, Montreal 1

Pete Falcone pitched a seven-hitter Sunday to lift the Mets over the Expos in Joe Torre's last game as New York manager (see story, Page B3).

Torre, who was hired on May 31, 1977, and managed the Mets to 286-420 record in his five seasons, was dismissed by general manager Frank Cashen before the game. Under Torre, the Mets never finished higher than fifth.

New York scored a run in the second off Bill Gullickson, 7-9, the first of five Montreal pitchers. Ellis Valentine beat out an infield hit and took second on the play on a throwing error by third baseman Tim Wallach. Staub then doubled Valentine home.

The other New York run came in the eighth when Mike Howard was walked with two out by Tom Gorman, stole second and scored on Ron Gardenhire's single.

Falcone, 5-3, struck out eight and walked none in goin' the distance for the third time.

National League

Philadelphia 2, Chicago 1

At Philadelphia, Lonnie Smith doubled to extend his hitting streak to 23 games, tying the National League high for the season, and highlight a two-run third inning that carried the Phillies.

The first-half champion Phillies, who finished the second half in third place with a 25-27 record, will meet the Montreal Expos in the National League East divisional playoff begining Wednesday in Montreal.

St. Louis 4, Pittsburgh 0

At Pittsburgh, Tom Herr scored a run and drove in another and Bob Shirley and two relievers combined on a four-hitter to lead the Cardinals. Shirley gave up three hits, walked none and struck out three in six innings to win his sixth game in 10 decisions. Silvio Martinez pitched two perfect innings in relief before giving way to Bob Sykes, who hurled the ninth.

Houston 5, Los Angeles 3

At Los Angeles, Alan Knicely's home run and key doubles by Dickie Thon and Dave Roberts brought the Astros from behind. The Astros had tied it in the eighth on Knicely's second homer of the season, off Dave Goltz. In the ninth, Thon led off with a double and advanced on a sacrifice. He scored on Gary Woods' single. After Woods was out attempting to stretch it into a double, Scott Loucks singled and scored on Roberts' double.

San Francisco 4, San Diego 3

At San Francisco, pinch-hitter Milt May's infield out in the eighth inning scored Jeff Ransom with the winning run, lifting the Giants.

The Giants scored three runs in the eighth off losing pitcher Eric Show, 1-3. Bob Brenly, Ransom and Guy Sularz had singles in the three-run eighth and the Giants also got two walks.

Fred Breining, who pitched 5 1-3 innings in relief, registered his fifth victory in seven decisions. Greg Minton pitched the final inning for his 21st save.

The Padres got RBI from Luis Salazar in the third, Doug Gwosdz in the eighth and their other run scored on starter Gary Lavelle's balk. Lavelle was ejected from the game for protesting the balk call.

Regular slate still in session for Royals, Tribe

By United Press International

Sunday was supposed to be the final day of this bizarre baseball season, but, characteristically, there's one more twist coming.

Although the 1981 season is over for everyone else, the Kansas City Royals must travel to Cleveland today to make up a double-header with the Indians. Kansas City has a one-half game lead over the Oakland A's and, after Sunday's loss to Oakland, the Royals need one victory in Cleveland to clinch the second-half title and secure two home games against the A's in the divisional playoff.

That playoff begins in Kansas City on Tuesday.

Dave McKay hit a solo homer in the seventh inning to give the A's a 4-3 victory Sunday over Kansas City, pushing the Royals' season into overtime in search of the second-half championship of the American League West.

McKay's fourth homer of the season came off Larry Gura, 11-8, with one out in the seventh to snap a 3-3 tie after the Royals had scored twice in the sixth on singles by Frank White, Willie Aikens, Amos Otis and Hal McRae to deadlock the game.

Dwayne Murphy drew a one-walk off Gura in the first and came all the way around to score on Tony Armas' double. Mickey Klutts then singled Armas home to stake starter Matt Keough to a 2-0 lead before he ever took the mound.

Baltimore 5, New York 2

At Baltimore, Eddie Murray blasted his 22nd homer and Doug DeCinces added a solo shot to lead the Orioles and Mike Flanagan, 9-6. Flanagan pitched seven innings and was aided by a three-run third inning.

Detroit 3, Milwaukee 2

At Milwaukee, Kirk Gibson's third single of the game knocked in the winning run in the ninth inning and right-hander Milt Wilcox scattered eight hits in leading Detroit over the Brewers.

Wilcox hurled his eighth complete game in boosting his record to 12-9. He struck out five and walked none.

American League

California 9, Texas 2

At Arlington, Tex., Don Baylor went 4-for-5 and drove in two runs to pace a 15-hit attack and lead the Angels. Mike Witt, 8-9, scattered 10 hits to record his seventh complete game.

Chicago 13, Minnesota 12

At Chicago, Jerry Hairston, who hit a grand slam in the eighth, capped a four-run ninth inning with an RBI single to lift the White Sox and Dewey Robinson, 1-0. Doug Corbett, 2-6, dropped the decision.

Seattle 2, Toronto 0

At Seattle, solo homers by Terry Bulling and Tom Paciorek gave the Mariners the victory. Floyd Bannister, 9-9, who pitched the first seven innings, and Shane Rawley combined for the shutout. It was Rawley's eighth save.

Boston 6, Cleveland 2

At Cleveland, Dwight Evans belted two homers and scored three times to spark the Red Sox. Boston starter Mike Torrez picked up his 10th victory against three losses with Luis Aponte notching his first save. John Denny, 10-6 was the loser.

Lancaster, Leazer lead trap shooters

TWIN FALLS — Hansen's Ed Lancaster blasted 95 of 100 targets to win the registered shooters' bracket Sunday in a trap shoot at the Rod and Gun Club.

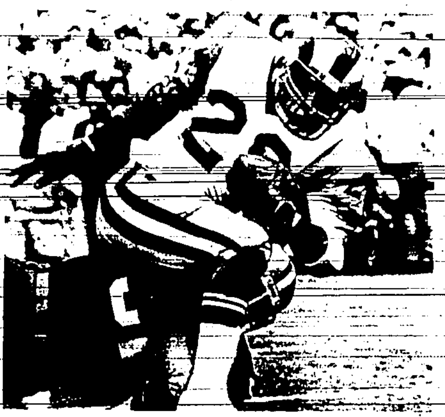

In the non-registered shooters division, Bob Leazer of Twin Falls hit 48 of 50 targets to lead all non-registered entries.

The event was held to commemorate National Trap Shooting Day.

Anita Farenwalt hit 40 targets for the best women's score. The high junior was Kerry Moncur, with 18, and Lyllia Shinn of Hazelton posted the best rookie score with 12.

Barbara Stewart compiled the best women's score, with 80, while Mark Johnson of Eden hit 86 targets to win the junior division.

In all, some 125 people participated in the event.

The loss dropped the Redskins to 0-5, matching their worst start since they lost the first nine games of the 1961 season. They also lost their first five games in 1965.

Hicks also had a second interception, which he returned 72 yards for the 49ers, 3-2. Ricky Patton ran 16 yards and Johnny Davis went one yard for the other 49er touchdowns while Matt Bahr kicked a 43-yard field goal.

Mike Nelms returned a punt 58 yards for a touchdown and Joe Washington went five yards to score, both in the fourth quarter, after Mark Moseley kicked a 34-yard field goal in the first half for the Redskins.

Packers 27, Giants 14

At East Rutherford, N.J., unheralded tight end Paul Coffman caught a one-yard touchdown pass and set up three other scores with key receptions to help Green Bay snap a three-game losing streak with a victory over error-prone New York.

Coffman, overshadowed in the Packers' offense by All-Pro wide receivers John Jefferson and James Lofton, capitalized on single coverage to catch six passes for 92 yards as Green Bay improved to 2-3.

Patriots 33, Chiefs 17

At Foxboro, Mass., Matt Cavanaugh passed for one touchdown and ran for a second and halfback Andy Johnson threw a 66-yard scoring strike to Stanley Morgan Sunday to lead New England to its first victory of the season.

New England, 1-4, intercepted four Kansas City passes — their first four of the year — and two of the interceptions set up touchdowns. Rookie Tony Collins scored on a 13-yard run for the Patriots while John Smith kicked two field goals, including a personal best 50-yarder in the third quarter.

Steelers 20, Saints 6

At New Orleans, Terry Bradshaw threw for 276 yards, including touchdown passes to Lynn Swann and John Stallworth, to lead Pittsburgh over New Orleans.

Bradshaw gave the Steelers the lead on a 16-yard touchdown pass to Swann in the first quarter and put the game away in the fourth period when he hit Stallworth with a 47-yard scoring strike. Bradshaw finished the game with 19 completions on 28 attempts.

Oilers 17, Bengals 10

At Houston, Earl Campbell bulled through the Cincinnati defense for 182 yards and a touchdown, and Carl Roaches broke a kickoff return 96 yards for a touchdown to carry the Houston in a contest for leadership in the AFC Central.

Campbell, shackled by Oiler gameplans as much as by opposing defenses this year, ran untouched around end for two yards and a TD in the second quarter to cap a drive in which he carried eight of the nine plays.

Buccaneers 28, Lions 10

At Tampa, Fla., Doug Williams threw two touchdown passes to Kevin House and added fourth-quarter scoring strikes to James Wilder and Jim O'Bradovich to give Tampa Bay a victory over Detroit.

With the score 14-10 in the fourth quarter, Williams hit Wilder behind the secondary on the right sidelines for the clinching touchdown. The score had been set up when Tampa Bay defensive end Bill Kollar recovered a Detroit fumble on the 50.

Jets 28, Dolphins 28

At Miami, Pat Leahy missed a 47-yard field goal attempt as time ran out in overtime and the New York Jets — sparked by Richard Todd's four touchdown passes — settled for a tie with Miami.

Chargers 24, Seattle 10

At San Diego, Dan Fouts fired three touchdown passes — two to Charlie Joiner and one to Kellen Winslow — to lead San Diego over Seattle.

Fouts, who hit on 30-of-41 passes for 303 yards, completed the Chargers' scoring with an 11-yard pass to Joiner with less than four minutes remaining in the game. Joiner, a 13-year veteran, also caught a 12-yard touchdown pass in the third quarter and Winslow took a nine-yard strike from Fouts in the second period.

Hanchey, Frank maintain leads, win Canyon Springs tourney

TWIN FALLS — Perry Hanchey and Tracy Frank protected their lead with few problems Sunday to win a Canyon Springs two-man better ball golf title.

The twosome ended the two-day tournament with a 135, four strokes ahead of Jim Purves and Dr. Chic Cutler.

It marked Frank's first win in better ball competition and capped a three win, one-runner-up season for Hanchey.

Terry Spackman and Glenn Blakeley of Burley claimed third at 142, one stroke ahead of Steve Ballard and Gary Jenkins.

First-flight net honors went to tournament-long leaders Jim Ochsner and Dan Featherson at 121. Second place went to Duane Schneberger and Al Rohweder at 126 with Jeff Rolig and Greg Hafer in third at 129.

In the second flight, the Buhl tandem of Dale Bartlett and Pat Hamilton staggered considerably off their opening day 74 but still hung on to win first place in gross at 159. That left them one stroke up on hard-finishing Bob Skrederstu and Harold Davison while Ken Anderson and Bart Rankin had a 163 for third.

Parry Jones and Bob White had no problems in the net division, turning in a 121, eight ahead of Ray Jeno and Bill Strom.

Rogers tips Crenshaw in Texas Open playoff

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (UPI) — British Open champion Bill Rogers dropped a 12-foot birdie putt on the first hole of sudden death Sunday to defeat Ben Crenshaw and capture his third straight tournament, the $250,000 Texas Open.

Rogers had to make a four-foot birdie putt on the par-3 18th hole to shoot a final-round 63 and a 72-hole total of 16-under 266 over the short Oak Hills Country Club course.

Moments later Crenshaw came to the final hole needing a par to force the playoff, but he put his tee shot in the tall grass alongside the green. Crenshaw then had to make an 18-foot uphill putt to shoot a final-round 64 and bring about sudden death.

Both hit perfect drives on the 390-yard, par-4 opening hole, but Crenshaw left his second shot 30 feet from the pin and had to be satisfied with a par. Rogers waited while Crenshaw two-putted and then rolled in his birdie that brought him first prize of $45,000.

Crenshaw, playing behind Rogers, then pushed his tee shot on the par-3 18th hole into the tall grass alongside the green and had to make an 18-foot uphill putt to save par and get into the playoff.

The rash of birdies during the closing round by Rogers and Crenshaw left third-round co-leaders Craig Stadler and Jim Colbert behind. They began the day at 11-under, but could manage only par 70's to tie Bob Murphy for third place at 11-under 279.

Tom Kite fired a 1-under-par 69 Sunday to finish tied for sixth and continue his streak of top-ten finishes. Kite won $8,687 to push his year's total to $364,401 — tops on the tour.

Kite also all but clinched the race for the Vardon Trophy, the award that goes to the lowest stroke average. His closest competitor for the award, Bruce Lietzke, skied to a 75 Sunday for a 277 total.

Rogers' victory boosted him to $315,411 for the year, fifth on the money list. He had won his two previous starts — the World Series of golf and a tournament in Japan. His triumph in the Texas Open brought him his first victory in his native state.

Rogers, who struggled early in the year and missed the cut in his first five tournaments, also won the Heritage Classic this year.

Crenshaw, who has been mired in a season-long slump, has not won a tournament this year. He tied for third in the Hawaiian Open and also lost a playoff to John Cook at the Crosby.

"I'm excited about winning, but it's a little sad too," said Rogers. "I beat one of my best friends.

"Today I couldn't have played a better round. I gave myself a lot of opportunities and I made a lot of them.

"It's kind of ironic because I'm supposed to play Ben in the World Match Play championship in England. I guess this was an early tester."

Rogers' victories in the World Series and British Open puts him in positionto possibly outduel Kite for player of the year honors.

"I'd like to win it," said Rogers. "But even without it, it's been a heck of a year for me."

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Alan: "I have noticed that bridge writers don't spend any time discussing part-score bidding. I guess the subject is too tough, but why can't we use an occasional hand where there is a part score?"

Oswald: "Here's one from a recent rubber bridge game at New York's Cavendish Club. I was North and Paul Trent South. Both sides were vulnerable and we had a part score of 40."

Alan: "I see you have written down the bidding. It looks as if that 40 part score actually helped you bid the slam."

Oswald: "It certainly did. After Paul's diamond opening and the spade overcall I was worried about two losing spades, but Paul is a really fine player and I had just the bid to leave the slam decision up to him. I jumped to five diamonds."

Alan: "The bid had to have a clear meaning in that it told your partner that your only worries were about spades and really demanded that he bid six if he could handle the second round of spades."

Oswald: "There was a little more to it. If he didn't hold the king of clubs, the club finesse was more than likely to be a winner. West had overcalled."

Alan: "You were a trifle lucky. Give Paul one more spade and one less heart and the slam might have been set. Still, fortune seems to favor the brave in war and almost everything else!"

Pope John Paul II waves to throng on his arrival for ceremony in St. Peter's Basilica

Pope pays visit to packed square

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope John Paul II, surrounded by the tightest security ever in the Vatican, returned to a packed St. Peter's Square Sunday for the first time since the assassination attempt by a Turkish terrorist nearly five months ago.

Body searches, metal detectors, color-coded tickets, miles of barricades, fewer entrances and additional security forces marked John Paul's appearance in the square to officiate at outdoor beatification ceremonies.

"There has never been security this rigid, this total and this organized here before," a Vatican security official said.

"Today I have had the joy, after nearly five months, of finding myself around the altar of the Basilica of St. Peter," John Paul told the crowd gathered in the light drizzle to see him.

The only direct contact John Paul had with the estimated crowd of 100,000 came at the end of the ceremony when, quickly followed by a dozen uniformed security men, he walked briskly down the steps of St. Peter's Basilica to shake hands with people sitting in wheelchairs.

Before the pope appeared, Vatican police used body searches and metal detectors to check many of the people lined up to enter the square while Italian police, some in bulletproof vests, patrolled adjoining neighborhoods.

A double ring of about two miles of wooden barricades surrounded the square and others cordoned off some sections into security zones.

Police restricted access to the square to nine entrances. Before the pope was shot May 13, people could enter and leave the square freely through the nearly 60 entrances formed by the spaces of the semi-circular Bernini colonnade that partly encloses it.

The pope arrived by helicopter from his summer retreat at Castel Gondolfo, where he has been recuperating from gunshot wounds he suffered in the assassination attempt. Instead of circling the square standing in his white jeep, as he did the day he was shot, he walked out of the front of St. Peter's Basilica to the covered altar where he celebrated mass.

A Turk, Mehmet Ali Agca, was arrested in St. Peter's and later sentenced to life imprisonment for the assassination attempt.

During Sunday's 2 hour, 15 minute ceremony, the pope beatified two French and three Italian Catholics who lived in the past four centuries.

Kuwait recalls envoy

KUWAIT (UPI) — Kuwait recalled its ambassador from Tehran Sunday to protest last week's Iranian bombing of a northern Kuwaiti oil complex.

Ambassador Abdel Aziz al-Jassem arrived home shortly after Kuwait issued an official statement, which said the Cabinet "discussed the Iranian attack in detail."

A government spokesman declined to say if Kuwait would cut all ties with Iran or if the Iranian Ambassador to Kuwait was asked to leave. The government statement said the recall was to "protest Thursday's aggression."

Kuwait's oil complex in the northern town of Um Aleish was damaged and part of the installation was set ablaze when three Iranian warplanes bombarded the region.

Iran denied the incident and said its planes were not in the area at the time, although U.S. Secretary of State Alexander Haig said the planes were detected by U.S.-manned AWACS surveillance aircraft.

Soviets fire oil minister

MOSCOW (UPI) — A deputy oil minister has been fired for falsifying production figures, misusing state funds and illegally moonlighting, a newspaper revealed Sunday.

The startlingly frank article in Socialist Industry said Elik M. Khalimov was removed from the deputy minister's job he held since December 1977. He faces further discipline from the Communist Party for cheating on his party dues payments, the article said.

V.Y. Solokov, another deputy oil minister in charge of resource disposal, was severely reprimanded for his part in the scandal.

For the past five years, the article said, the Ministry of Petroleum Industry was supposed to be developing ways to increase the petroleum recovery rate during extraction, thus boosting Soviet oil production, already the world's largest.

However, a check by the Communist Party Control Committee revealed "that in the course of the five years, the ministry virtually made no serious effort to address the problem.

"Report figures were just made up," it said.

"When inspectors visited oil fields, they found thousands of barrels filled with imported chemical reagents dumped along railway tracks, abandoned quarries or buried under railways.

"The total of uninstalled machinery is estimated at 36 million rubles ($46.8 million). There were 40,000 tons of unused chemical," the article said.

The scandal is made more serious because oil exports are the Soviet Union's largest single source of badly needed foreign currency. Last year, Soviet production topped 600 million tons, the equivalent of 12.1 million barrels a day.

The article said current extraction processes retain less than half the potential petroleum in the ground. Had the ministry done its job and improved recovery rates to 55 or 60 percent, the article said, Soviet production would have jumped 100 to 180 million tons.

Socialist Industry said that when confronted with evidence of gross mismanagement in the ministry, Khalimov, 50, said he had been too busy at the office to make personal inspections to the oil fields.

A further check, however, revealed that the deputy minister spent much of his time illegally moonlighting as a professor at the Moscow Institute of Petrochemical and Gas Industries and was also being paid to edit scientific publications for oil research groups.

Second win for Karpov

MERANO, Italy (UPI) — Soviet World champion Anatoly Karpov soundly defeated challenger Viktor Korchnoi in the second game of their world chess championship match Sunday to take a commanding 2-0 lead in the series.

Korchnoi, a Soviet exile, resigned on the 57th move of the adjourned game that began Saturday after Karpov, playing white, pressed his advantage with a lethal passed pawn ploy on the queen's side of the board.

The third game is scheduled for Monday.

The second game resumed after the two men played 41 moves Saturday evening, and Karpov quickly showed the mastery that won him the first game easily Thursday.

The two bitter rivals began their second game promptly and again did not shake hands or give each other any sign of recognition.
